Heaven in California
A Land of Bargains
Lethal Chamber Exit
Those Names of Greece

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1926, by the Star Company)

WHEN THE FORTUNATE arrive in Heaven, it probably takes some time for them to get used to it. Their new power of flight, brilliant wings, tuneful harps, singing, celestial music, streets of gold, all the wonders must overwhelm a spirit newly arrived from earth.

JUST SO, in California. The first few days it is hard to think of working, hard to interest yourself in what goes on in cold Eastern and Northern lands, to say nothing of distant unimportant realms east of the Atlantic Ocean.

Byron, in Greece, was filled with emotion when he stood where:

"The mountains look on Marathon
And Marathon looks on the sea."

How would he feel in Southern California?

These mountains that still look on Marathon would be mole hills out here, and as for that little sea, sailed by the Greeks, you could drop a thousand like it into the Pacific Ocean and not raise the water level one inch.

THE POPULATION of Japan in the last five years has increased 3,773,651. That interests the world, outside of Asia, even more than in Asia.

What would happen if the Chinese, numbering 400,000,000 officially, and in reality numbering probably 600,000,000, should learn to cut the death rate among children and raise China's census to 1,500,000,000?

Has Providence in reserve some mysterious way of solving the riddle of excess population, without war, famine or plague?

Or must the world eventually face a war of races, yellow and white, to settle world supremacy?

IF ANYBODY offers any bargain in California, take it. It may not seem a bargain at the time, but late, that changes.

Ask the son-in-law of Mr. Durant, automobile-maker, what happened to him the night he ate the good dinner at the Bolsa Chica Shooting Club, south of Los Angeles. Robert M. Moulsette of Pasadena, who knows all about real estate and oil, told the story, pointing to an oil derrick next to the club house.

IN THE COURSE of the dinner the gentleman from the East learned that the club members liked him and would let him buy a membership for $7,000. He didn't need it, as he did little shooting, but was polite, and accepted.

Soon afterward Standard Oil rented the "rights" on the grounds of the Bolsa Chica Club on an oil-sharing basis. They have brought in one well already, and may bring in dozens more. The one well brought in now pays each member of the club $1,200 a month profit. Mr. Durant's son-in-law gets $14,400 a year on an investment of $7,000, made "just to be a good fellow." And there is no telling how much more he will make.

California is the land of bargains.

TODAY IN THE Nevada State prison two white men will be killed with lethal gas, new method of strangling murderers.

COOLIDGE CALLS FOR SEIZURE

New York, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—New York City's coal shortage reached a serious stage today when Bellevue Hospital, housing 1,377 patients, was unable to get coal, and the hospital was without heat. Between 500 and 600 tons of coal had been promised for delivery for today, but the coal company which had the order failed to make delivery. Bellevue Hospital, with its subsidiary institutions, is the largest hospital in this country.

Washington, Jan. 20 (Universal).—That President Coolidge favors adoption of a Constitutional amendment providing definite authority for the United States government to seize and operate the coal mines whenever necessary to protect the people from the suffering caused by lockout or strike, was indicated to persons with whom he discussed the situation at the White House. This intimation was coupled with a specific demand by the President upon Congress to pass, without further delay, the important anti-coal

COYOTE IS TOO SLY

With a price of $25 on his head, the sum offered by the Boston Evening American for his capture, the coyote which escaped five days ago from Franklin Park Zoo, still prowled and foraged today, somewhere near or perhaps right in Boston, a menace to unsuspecting children.

While the hunt was being pushed with renewed energy throughout the city, due to the general interest caused by the Evening American's reward offer, reports came from Hanover that a strange animal answering the description of the coyote wounded a valuable dog. Hunters made an effort to capture the animal but it escaped.

The coyote is said to be quarrelsome. Hunger, it is feared, may drive the animal to attack livestock.

Woods in the vicinity of Hanover are being beaten by hunters in an effort to snare the animal which appeared there.

An animal shot near Hicksville, Long Island, just forty miles from Times square, New York city, was identified today as a coyote by Dr. George P. Englehard, curator of the Brooklyn Museum. Dispatches said the animal was shot last week and for that reason officials here are inclined to doubt that it is the one that escaped from the Boston zoo.

LOVE CHILD SHARES HER CELL

Mary H. MacClary, 17-year-old unwed mother, of Allston street, Cambridge, and her baby, Chester, 18 months old. When seized as stubborn child after Providence elopement, Mary refused to part with her child, and both were held over night in police station. Mary now says she wants to marry the youth with whom she ran away. The latter, Wesley A. Miller, 17, has been accused of "abducting" her.

BLAME PHONE DELAY FOR $100,000 FIRE

Springfield, Jan. 20.—Fire destroyed the three-story brick building of John R. Lyman Waste Company on Liberty street, with a loss estimated at $100,000, and for two hours threatened to spread to adjoining buildings in the business district.

Fire department officials are investigating the charge made by M. A. Friend, watchman at the building, that he tried for five minutes to notify the department of the fire by telephone but getting no response from the operator finally had to run to a box.

Besides the waste plant, the offices of the Lyman-Beers Company, dealing in plating and polishing supplies; the United Oriental Rug Company and Wilbraham Ignition Company were destroyed.

ELKS' CHIEF IN PLEA FOR 'OLD IRONSIDES'

Former United States Collector of Internal Revenue John F. Malley, prominent Massachusetts member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, declared today that the best thing that has happened up to date in the campaign for a $500,000 fund for the restoration of "Old Ironsides" was the announcement that the pupils of Boston schools are to have a part in the movement.

Statements by Dr. Frederick L. Rogan, chairman; Mr. Edward M. Sullivan and Mr. William G. O'Hare of the Boston School Committee, to the effect that on Monday evening next they will vote to open the schools to the "Old Ironsides" campaign, mean new life to this patriotic movement and promise the hap-

GIRL ELOPER IN JAIL AGAIN

Back into a clammy jail with her baby went seventeen-year-old Mary H. McClary, unwed mother of Cambridge, today, but she declares that Wesley A. Miller, also seventeen and of Cambridge, will marry her, even if he isn't father of her child.

As a result of her elopement with Wesley—in elopement without a marriage—the child-mother was held in $200 today as a stubborn child in East Cambridge Court, while Wesley was held in $500 on an abduction charge.

She pleaded guilty to her charge, while her youthful Romeo denied his guilt. In default of the bail, both were remanded to East Cambridge jail, and Mary's baby accompanied her into a cell.

Mary's mother and father were in court and consulted with her before she went back to jail. But Wesley's parents, declared by Mary to be doubtful over the match, were not present.

The marital decision came after a weary night spent by Mary and her

PLOT TO PUSH AMERICA INTO COURT IS CHARGED BY MISSOURI SENATOR

Washington, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—With advocates of the World Court pressing for a vote, and accusing the opposition of dilatory tactics, Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, continued in the Senate today his attack on the resolution proposing American membership in the tribunal.

In the course of his speech Mr. Reed paid his respects to both Andrew Carnegie and Edward W. Bok, donor of the Bok Peace Prize—for their utterances on the subject of world peace.

Carnegie's money, he said, was being used to put over the court. Bok he described as a native of Holland, who had made his money out of ladies' magazines, and now was trying to influence American public opinion with this money.

He declared the Bok peace award was nothing but a "self-glorification scheme of Bok," and that he doubted if the prize ever reached its destination.

SEES EUROPEAN PLOT.

Charging that great influence had been exercised by foreign nations to secure the United States' entry in the World Court, Senator Reed read a list of American financiers who had received decorations from the French government. Among them was Owen D. Young, whom the Senator described as "president of the General Electric Company, and author of the Dawes plan."

This statement brought laughter from the floor and galleries and a smile from Vice-President Dawes, who was presiding.

Scores of paid agents were hired to lecture for the World Court, Senator Reed continued, and a "justice of the Supreme Court was taken from

SWIG'S SON EDWARD HELD FOR BAD CHECKS

Edward J. Swig of Quincy, son of Simon Swig, vice-president of the defunct Tremont Trust Company of Boston, was arraigned in police court at Newport, R. I., today, charged with passing two worthless checks in that city. Swig pleaded not guilty and the case was put over for hearing on January 29. Security was fixed at $1,500.

Swig was arrested at Newport by Inspector Furey. He is charged with giving worthless checks to Samuel Adelson, wholesale tobacconist. The first check, it is charged, was passed in December, 1923, and amounted to $840.76. The second check was passed in January of the following year and amounted to $394.88, according to the complaint.

The checks were given for tobacco supplies purchased at the Adelson store, it is claimed. Both checks, drawn on the Bristol County Trust Company of Taunton, were protested, police say.

MERCIER'S DYING WISH IS FOR UNIFIED CHURCH

Brussels, Jan. 20 (A.P.)—With life slowly ebbing, and calmly awaiting the end, Cardinal Mercier still retains the spirit to do which gave him worldwide fame when the Germans invaded Belgium and through out the great war.

The aged prelate is seeking to bring about a union of the Roman and Anglican Churches, a task he has been engaged in and praying for since the end of the war. Despite the desires of his physician, the Cardinal discussed with Abbe Portal, a missionary priest of Paris, the prospects for the union.

The Cardinal passed a relatively good night, and his general condition this morning was unchanged. Physicians and members of his entourage again expressed astonishment at the resistance the aged prelate is offering to his illness, and the cheerfulness with which he faces the crisis.

"I want to live three months, to see accomplished the work of reconciliation of the churches which has always been so near my heart," he is said to have exclaimed just before his operation in December.

Today he hoped again to confer on the subject with the churchmen of his archbishopric.

Belgium is moved by the desperate state of the man who so bravely championed the cause of the Belgian people during the German invasion. Even in the little countryside hamlets the arrival of letters or newspapers is anxiously awaited in the hope of some word to indicate that he has a chance for recovery.

Throughout Belgium masses are being said frequently and prayers offered that he may be restored to health. The papal nuncio in Brussels sends to Rome every few hours the latest reports from the doctors, and most of the embassies and legations inquire twice or more daily for news.

BAY STATE WARNED OF SLUSH FUND IN WORLD COURT PROPAGANDA

PLOTTING TO ENTER LEAGUE

A warning that fortunes are being expended to propagandize the people and the Senate of the United States to secure adherence by this nation to the World Court, as the first step toward entrance to the League of Nations, was delivered to a committee of the Legislature today at the State House.

The warning was given by speakers who appeared before the Joint Legislative Committee on Constitutional Law in support of the petition of ex-Senator Walter H. Merrill that the Massachusetts Legislature memorialize the Senate of the United States to withhold its approval of this country's participation in the World Court.

Besides Mr. Merrill, James T. Williams, Jr., editor of the Boston Evening American; E. W. Burnham of the Civil Alliance, and Wendell P. Thorpe spoke in favor of the proposed resolution. Whitfield York of Winchester spoke in opposition.

LEAGUE PAYS COURT.

The World Court is now a parcel of the League of Nations, as evidenced by the fact that the league pays the salaries of the judges and other expenses, declared Merrill.

So far the voice of Massachusetts has not been raised in this issue, either in favor or against adherence to the World Court, he said, and it is time the Senators were apprised of how "the people back home" feel about it.

In support of his contention that entrance into the court is considered by those in favor of this step as merely the first move toward joining the League, Merrill cited the stand of pacifists, including Mrs. L. J. Johnson and Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead of Massachusetts, who have discussed the subject at various legislative hearings.

Replying to questions by Chairman Gaspar Bacon of the committee, he declared it his firm conviction that the other nations participating in the court could act on matters involving the United States even if the United States did not care to submit those matters, in other words, submission was compulsory, once the United States was a member.

LODGE'S LAST PLEA.

"Our whole foreign policy would be imperilled by entrance into the World Court," he declared. "Why is not the present Hague Tribunal sufficiently capable of transacting matters that this World Court is designed to transact? The Hague Tribunal settled the difficult Newfoundland fisheries problem satisfactorily and if it could settle that problem, it can surely settle most other problems in satisfactory manner.

"The last plea of the late Senator Lodge, whose voice is stilled, but whose spirit is still with us, was a warning against the dangers of entering into foreign political alliances."

James T. Williams, Jr., told of the flood of petitions reaching the committee in favor of adherence, practically all of them traceable to the propaganda of Edward W. Hole and others.

The Senators have no means of knowing the identity of these propaganda organizations forwarding petitions to their Chiefton, he says the bills for transportation of representatives of these organizations to Washington," he said.

BRITISH DOMINATION.

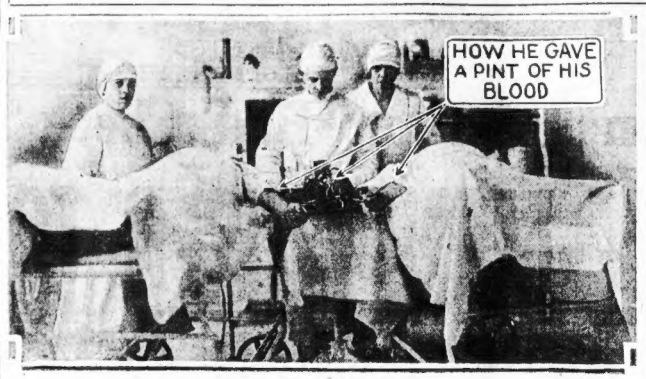

Mr. Williams explained the domination of the World Court by Great Britain as a result of the eight votes to the two of the United States, should the nation join the court, and told of an article in the London Times in which it was said that the League in effect was similar to the expansion of the British Empire.

"Roosevelt liked Britishers," he declared, "but he said that in international matters a Britisher was a Britisher to the last. We must not permit the shrine of America to be transferred from Mt. Vernon to Sandgrave Manor. The Monroe Doctrine must stand."

Representative Douglass of Fairhaven had himself recorded by the committee as in favor of the resolution of Mr. Merrill. A letter was read from Congressman George Holden Tinkham who regretted his inability to appear today to speak, as he much desired, in favor of the resolution.

the hotch and sent on a barnstorming trip through the United States.

Senator Reed said that the court's supporters, holding that the tribunal could not assume jurisdiction over a dispute without the consent of the nations involved, had confessed that it could not prevent a war.

WOULD LOWER AMERICA.

Unification of the vote of France and England and their associates, along with many of the minor countries of the League, constitutes a decisive control of authority of the League, he held.

Dividing the League membership on the basis of white and colored, the Senator placed nearly four times as great a population in the nations of colored people than in those of white population. He gave the figures as white, 293,162,000; colored 434,540,000.

The religion of the various nations ran "the gamut from Buddhism to Christianity," he said, "and one of them practices cannibalism.

"Many of them reject God and our civilization," he declared. Senator Reed argued that all the systems of law, Hindu, Mohammedan law, Turkish law and the others would become the basis for decisions by the Court and that this would take the United States down to the level of Turkism and Mohammed laws.

"I denounce it," he shouted. "There is only one word to describe it. I have too much respect for the Senate to utter that word. Let the American people brand that word on the brows of those who would surrender the independence of the United States."

"I would like to know," he said, "how much more he gets for misleading the people of the United States than he got for sitting on the supreme bench."

With opening of today's session Senator Reed and Vice-President Dawes clashed over the Senate's debate on the court resolution. Reed resented a radio speech made last night by Dawes in which the Missouri senator believed he had been held up as a target of criticism by the Vice-President.

SCORED BY COPELAND.

The Vice President, who was presiding, interrupted to say that he was not referring to Senator Reed, but to the "Senator from New York," when he told a radio audience that a fresh demonstration of the need for a rules revision had been given during yesterday's session of the Senate. In his radio speech Dawes referred to the continuance of debate on the World Court issue while the tax bill was awaiting consideration. He particularly scored the reading of an article "written years ago" into the records by the New York Senator.

Senator Copeland, Democrat, New York, then arose to declare that the article he read was not written years ago, but "yesterday, in the year 1926."

"I have no disposition to debate here my rights and duties as United States Senator," said Senator Copeland, "but I do resent the inaccurate statement made by the Vice-President in his reply to the Senator from Missouri.

Vice-President Dawes, following these two attacks, apologized to Senator Copeland. He said his criticism had been meant to "apply generally to certain tactics used in the debate and not to any particular senator."

After the Vice-President had replied, senate leaders favoring the World Court were accused by Senator Reed of taking advantage of his physical condition on yesterday when he was suffering from a sore throat, and of refusing to recess and permit him to extend his remarks in the record.

"The request was one of courtesy that has been almost universally extended in this body," he said. "It has been extended once in this debate. The article by Andrew Carnegie which I wanted read was important to the subject."

strike legislation now pending before it.

President Coolidge declared to his callers that he stands four-square behind the recommendations of the United States Coal Commission, which include:

Creation of a fact finding commission to investigate and place the blame for continuer strikes, and with power to arbitrate trouble at the request of miners and operators.

Power for the Interstate Commerce Commission to seize all available coal and to provide for equitable distribution of it among the States.

Formation by States and local Governments of coal committees, with power to buy coal, to store it in anticipation of strikes and then to sell it to their people at cost.

That President Coolidge has caused a complete study to be made of the possible right of the National Government to seize and operate the mines was definitely indicated, to the surprise of some of his visitors.

25 NAVY PLANES OFF ON 1ST HOP TO GUANTANAMO

Washington, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—The 25 naval planes which hopped off from Hampton Roads today for Guantanamo, Cuba, may take two weeks to reach their destination.

Several stops will be made to take on fuel, the schedule calling for landings at Charleston, S. C., Miami and Key West, and possibly one or two other places.

The squadron will manoeuvre with the Atlantic fleet. The aircraft tender Wright left for Cuba ahead of the planes, and for much of the distance will be within reach if needed.

TWO PRISONERS SAW WAY OUT OF JAIL IN MAINE

Saco, Me., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Rather than face Supreme Court Justice Sturgis, before whom they were to have been taken for sentence today, Joseph Turgeon and Henry Cyr, both of Biddeford, sawed their way out of the Saco jail and escaped. Turgeon had been convicted of a liquor sale, Cyr was awaiting sentence for breaking into a store in Sanford. Jail officials say they believe outside friends furnished the saws.

GOO-GOOS' SENTINELS MOVE NEAR CITY HALL

In order to be just a little nearer so as to be able to observe at closer range the doings of the city government, the Good Government Association, for the past twenty-three years a tenant in Barristers' Hall, will shortly move to the Waterman building, in School street, opposite City Hall.

Secretary McCaffrey said: "The G. G. A. has a career of wide usefulness ahead of it. We're rid of the spellman, at least, but the G. G. A. must carry on the job of keeping them out of City Hall."

NEW BLOOD MAY SAVE MOTHER OF TRIPLETS

The life of Mrs. Anna Barry, 27, mother of triplets, has probably been saved by a blood transfusion, according to a report today from the Lynn Hospital, where the operation was performed.

The young mother, who gave birth to the three lusty youngsters, two girls and a boy, on Christmas Eve, at first seemed to be in first-class condition, but she soon began to fade.

When the staff surgeons called for volunteers, more than 100 answered the call, and Pason MacLaine was chosen to supply the blood that will probably save the mother's life.

The babies, in another part of the hospital, are gaining weight daily.

YOUNG ELOPERS

18-month-old boy Chester, in the detention room of the Brattle square police station, according to the girl.

A few blocks away young Miller, who lives at No. 176 Brookline street, Cambridge, had spent the night in a cell as the alleged abductor of his sweetheart. Mary herself was under charge of being a stubborn child.

As she had refused frequently before, loyal Mary refused again today to identify the father of her child.

HIDES NAME OF BETRAYER.

"What's the use?" she said. "I'm happy now. It would do no good to drag him into trouble. And Wesley is going to marry me."

The girl said she was fifteen years old when she met the man who is the father of little Chester. But after Chester was born, she said, the father forgot all his promises of marriage and ran away, leaving her to face the world alone.

And then, in December, nearly a month ago, she eloped with Wesley Miller to Providence. According to the police, the boy took $50 from his mother's trunk before he ran away.

The couple spent a night at a Providence hotel, then moved to a rooming house to live on the remainder of the $50 roll.

When Wesley failed to find work, and rent for their room was overdue, the young couple and the baby were ejected Monday night. They spent that night in the railroad depot in Providence. Wesley left the young mother in charge of the Travelers' Aid society there.

NEARLY FAMISHED.

Providence police who questioned the little mother as she waited in the rooms of the Travelers' Aid where she and her famished baby were fed, notified Cambridge police. Officers Ackerly and Donelan went to Providence, and returned with the couple.

According to Providence police, Mary said Wesley had abducted her but on the way back to Cambridge, she insisted she had left home of her own volition.

When Cambridge officers suggested that she leave the baby at the home of her mother, the girl pouted and refused to go home.

"Lock me up with the baby," she said. "It is my baby; it is not Wesley's."

BIG ESTATE LEFT BY RECLUSE

Chicago Mystery Woman Is Believed to Be From Watertown

Charges of murder by poisoning, and forgery of a will disposing of an estate of $100,000, today featured the investigation into the death of Mrs. Mary E. French Sterling, mysterious Chicago recluse, believed to have been a resident of Watertown years ago.

The amazing story of the 77-year-old recluse, who lived in poverty and died leaving a fortune, was revealed in dispatches from Chicago.

The woman, thought at one time to have been a writer, for twenty years led a strange, lonely existence in the attic of her boarded-up, ramshackle house in Park Ridge, a suburb of Chicago.

With the exception of one neighbor, a Mrs. Harriet Dahlman, to whom she is alleged to have left all her property, Mrs. Sterling shunned human-kind and withdrew entirely from the world.

On her death, however, the authorities stepped in and began investigations which may have far-reaching consequences. The coroner is investigating for poison, and the probate court is seeking evidence that the will was forged.

A feature of the woman's fantastic existence was the occasional display in a window of a dress form draped in a bride's costume, with a crudely made head, with a light shining beside it.

Weirdest of all were two grave-like mounds, found after Mrs. French's death, each marked with a stick on which was hung an inverted teacup, and which were in her backyard.

The police intend to investigate these mounds, in the hope of finding something to throw light on the disappearance of the woman's husband nineteen years ago.

Her death was revealed by Edward Ostronski, an attorney, whose story appears in copyrighted form in the Chicago Herald and Examiner today.

On the day Mrs. French died Ostronski appeared at the home of John Dahlman, a neighbor, and announced he was the executor of the estate. A petition and inventory fixed the potential value of the estate at $1,500, but inheritance tax officers with Ostronski found Liberty bonds and stocks valued at $20,600 in a Chicago bank.

Ostronski said he met Mrs. French through the Dahlmans about a year ago, and she asked him to draw up a will for her December 22. Two other wills were found when the safety deposit box was opened, bequeathing the estate to Mary L. French, who, the police said, was the testator's foster mother, dead fourteen years.

CONCERNED IN $35,000 SHORTAGE

Were Deprived of Pay From December 28 to Last Week and Demand to Know Why

Fall River, Jan. 20.—Fall River's muddled finances, which have become a political issue and subject of several bills and petitions filed at the State House, were given a new angle today when two police inspectors who wished to examine the accounts for the years 1924 and 1925 were politely but firmly denied access to the records.

The police have been active in the financial muddle, for they did not receive any pay from December 28 until last week, when it was stated that the city was some $35,000 short in its accounts.

Today Inspectors William O'Brien and Joseph Dufresne of the local police department were sent to the office of City Auditor Charles E. Sevigny with orders to examine the accounts for the last two years.

They made known their mission to the auditor and he asked if they were there as private citizens or as representatives of the law. When they said that they were acting under orders, and accordingly were representatives of the law, Sevigny told them that though he had nothing to conceal they could not see the books without an order from the Board of Aldermen, approved by Mayor Edmund E. Talbot.

They returned to police headquarters and the city is awaiting the next move on the part of their superiors.

5 UNIDENTIFIED BODIES HELD IN MORGUE

The bodies of five men who met death by accident are held at the Southern mortuary, and Medical Examiner Dr. Timothy Leary is anxious that the descriptions be published, in order that relatives or friends may learn what has happened.

One body was found on Albany street, near Seneca street, on November 27, the victim apparently having been struck down by an automobile. The body is that of a man apparently between fifty and sixty years of age, gray-haired and blue-eyed. He wore a black overcoat, blue jumper, gray trousers, a khaki shirt, white working gloves and black lace shoes.

The second body is that of a man found on Neponset avenue on December 12. The victim was five feet eleven inches in height; brown-haired and blue-eyed. He wore a grey overcoat, brown jacket, grey shirt, gray striped trousers, black overalls, gray socks and black shoes.

The third man was found frozen in a field off Fargo street, South Boston, on December 28. He was five feet seven inches, gray haired and blue eyed. He wore a brown overcoat, blue suit, white striped shirt, black shoes, brown stockings, a Havelock black cap, and in his pocket was a gold Elgin watch.

The fourth body is that of a victim of carbon monoxide gas in a South End lodging house on December 13. A man identified as Daniel Hanlen also met his death at the time. The unidentified man was five feet two inches in height, about 35 years old, brown haired. He wore a brown plaid overcoat, brown trousers, black stockings and shoes and a brown cap.

The last body is that of a man found on the New Haven tracks on Christmas Day. He wore a brown overcoat, brown trousers, black stockings and black shoes and was apparently about 35 years old.

A watch found on the body of one of the men, found frozen to death December 28 in Fargo street, South Boston, may lead to identification. Investigation revealed the watch had been pawned in a South Boston store on October 28, by a man who gave his name as Timothy Sullivan.

BENTON WILL NOT RUN FOR HIS PLACE AGAIN

Attorney-General Jay R. Benton today announced that he will not be a candidate for his present office at the next election. His announcement came directly after his report and his suggestion that the police of the metropolitan district be centralized under one head. His notice that he is not to be a candidate immediately does away with the charges made by some politicians that his suggestion was simply a campaign scheme."

What a Wife Needs Is Told in Baring Pajama Frolic

New York, Jan. 20.—It takes $2,500 for rent, $1,600 for Summer expenses, $1,800 for provisions, $840 for maid's salary, $2,500 for clothing, $1,000 for entertainment and $1,000 for miscellaneous expenses for a woman and her son to live, according to a list submitted to Supreme Court Justice Tierney by Mrs. Elise I. Tappin, seeking a divorce from Lindsay Tappin, of the Stock Exchange.

Two friends of Mrs. Tappin, Reginald M. Banks and Robert C. Winters, and two private detectives testified they were in a raid conducted by Mrs. Tappin at midnight, Oct. 26, on Tappin's apartment.

Newspaperless Nation

Bucharest, Rumania, Jan. 20 (A.P.)—"We'll give you a taste of a newspaperless country," is the burden of a memorandum handed to the Minister of the Interior by representatives of all opposition papers, in protest against the recent military censorship.

LOOT REGISTER WHILE GIRL PHONES

A slick thief and his accomplice, working the "neighboring telephone ruse," which netted $95 from the furniture store of Charles F. McManus of No. 721 Massachusetts avenue, Arlington, will be arrested today, it is expected, by Lieutenant Daniel F. Hooley of Arlington.

Edna, pretty daughter of McManus, was in charge of the store when a neighbor called her to the telephone.

The accomplice kept her talking for several minutes, long enough for a neatly dressed man, whom Edna had observed watching the store, to rifle the cash register and disappear.

EVELYN THAW PLANS RETURN TO GOTHAM

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was planning for a return to New York within the next two days.

Miss Thaw was discharged from a West Side hospital several days ago, fully recovered from the effects of her latest suicidal attempt.

WIFE SAYS LOVE FIZZLE SOURED HUBBY'S MA

Portland, Me., Jan. 20.—They were married on the Night Before the Fourth in Boston and her mother-in-law set off the fireworks later, Mrs. Alice White Shallit of Roxbury, Mass., charged today in opening an alienation suit in Supreme Court.

Mrs. Shallit, graduate of the Dorchester High School in 1916 and mother of a seven-month-old baby, wants $250,000 from her mother-in-law, Mrs. Annie R. Shallit, wealthy Portland woman as the price of the wrecked marriage.

Alice's father and mother, the former a Boston lawyer living at No. 69 Hutchins street, Roxbury, were in court prepared to testify for their daughter.

The Roxbury girl and Dr. Harold M. Shallit, Portland dentist, were married in 1925 at the Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston.

They went to live in the Marlboro Apartments in Portland, a block owned by her mother-in-law, and things were happy until a St. Louis man visited Mrs. Shallit, senior, and she went with him on a trip to Canada, the Roxbury girl testified.

Following the return, a letter from St. Louis wrecked the marital plans of her mother-in-law, she continued.

Thereafter, according to the witness, her mother-in-law set about making the young couple's home life "miserable."

Miss Bennett Jilts Rich Suitor, Weds Dancer

And so Wilda Bennett is married to Pepe de Albro!

Only three weeks ago he was dancing at the Hotel Brunswick and at the Club Argonauta—the slicked-up hoofer who danced with June Day and who calmed the Argentine as his country and the pampas as his native heath.

It was a matter of excitement in Hub circles that ring around after dark when word of black-haired Wilda's elopement with the dancer was received in Boston.

Even more exciting was the realization that Albro had won out over the multi-millionaire horseman, Charley Frey, who had stood staunchly with her when Frey's wife sued Wilda for alienation of his affections—and won.

Albro was a familiar figure in Boston up to New Year's. He drifted into the Hub early, in the Fall and soon was dancing in the Egyptian Room at the Brunswick with June Day, danseuse, who claims to be the daughter of an English baronet.

By the diners and dancers at the Brunswick it was understood that Albro and Miss Day had come direct to Boston from Paris.

Undoubtedly—in the light of his romance—Albro must have danced over to New York on week-ends even during the time Wilda was embroiled in the court case, for Wilda has not played Boston in many months.

And his romance must have been as nimble as his dancing, for the announcement of their elopement, made in Texas Guinan's new "Three Hundred Club" in New York took away the breaths of the celebrities. They were some breaths.

A wild celebration followed in the club and the irony of it all was that Frey, the millionaire, jilted for a man twenty years his junior and comparatively poor, had been observing a seat at his table all evening for Pepe, whom he had counted as one of his best friends.

While the celebration was at its height, Frey faded out of the picture, declaring he was going to Florida to forget.

AUTO HITS GIRL; DRIVER SEIZED

Six-year-old Mary McGaffigan of No. 266 Shawmut avenue is near death in the City Hospital, as the result of an auto accident and the alleged driver of the car is held by police for driving without a license.

The child had just left her home on an errand for her mother and was crossing Shawmut avenue at West Dedham street when an auto driven by Almin W. Almins of Shawmut avenue, hit her, ran upon the sidewalk, and, according to witnesses, started away from the scene.

Several young men leaped on the running board and forced the driver to stop. Almins denied running away, but police held him when it was found he did not have a license in his possession.

The little girl was rushed to the City Hospital where it was found she had a fractured skull besides numerous cuts and bruises.

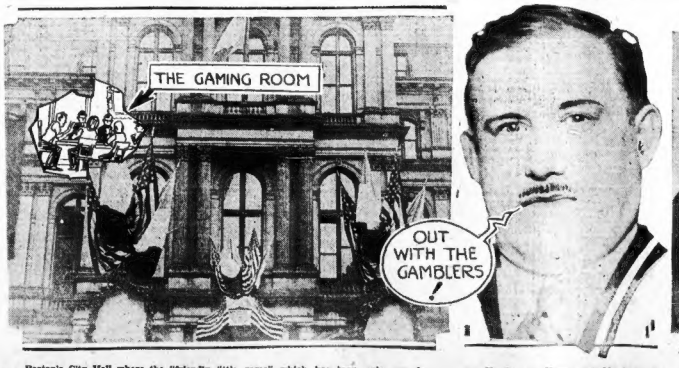

REDMONDS' LUXURIANT FURNITURE AT AUCTION

By order of the trustees of the bankrupt brokerage firm of C. F. Redmond Company, Inc., a public auction of the luxurious furnishings of the palatial Redmond home in Newton was held today in a downtown mart.

Mrs. Mildred Redmond, wife of the convicted broker, now serving time in Atlanta, assented to the auction, but will seek through the courts recovery of the proceeds.

TWO SCARED BURGLARS LEAVE TOOLS BEHIND

An attempt by two men to rob telephone pay stations in the women's waiting room of the Boston & Maine station at Salem, was frustrated early today by Harry Whiteside, a station agent. The thieves had forced a window and were working on the money boxes when Whiteside returned. Hearing the lock turned they fled through the open window and escaped in an automobile parked a short distance away. A set of burglar tools were found in one of the telephone booths.

WIFE SLICKS HIM OF TINY STIPEND, 'PROF' SAYS

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 20 (A.P.)—Frederick H. Blodgett, a professor in New York University, told Justice Seeger in Supreme Court today that his wife allowed him only 60 cents a day for lunch when they were living together.

Sometimes, Blodgett testified, he could only spend 30 cents for his midday meal because he had given most of his money to his wife. He gave her, he asserted, part interest in two trust funds, many bonds and securities and the most of a large inheritance. Now with his salary, he said, he has only $4,000 a year.

Mrs. Blodgett brought suit on grounds of cruelty and abandonment. Decision was reserved.

AUTO MOUNTS SIDEWALK TO STRIKE PEDESTRIAN

John Marshall, twenty-nine, of Venice street, Neponset, was injured today when an automobile driven by Richard Barry of No. 1165 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, climbed the sidewalk at Boylston and Charles streets, struck an electric light pole and ended its wild ride against the iron fence of the Public Gardens. Barry, who was driving, was uninjured and rushed Marshall to City Hospital in a taxi. Marshall's injuries are not serious.

MALLEY TO BOOM 'OLD IRONSIDES' FUND

by completion of the work within a few months.

"And what we needed the most," former Senator Malley said, "was not so much the money Boston will give to the fund, as the moral effect the psychological effect, of Boston participation.

"Every dime we get for the fund in Boston will mean $100 collected elsewhere!

"I sincerely hope we shall have not merely a majority vote of the School Committee, but a unanimous vote. That news will go out into the country like that shot that was heard around the world.

"Elks in other cities simply could not understand the attitude taken by Boston several months ago. Surely, it appeared to some of them, this rebuilding of the famous U. S. S. Constitution could not be a patriotic venture, else Boston schools would be front and foremost in it.

"Not many of us in Boston appreciate how highly our city is regarded in this respect. Americans in the Middle West, the West and the Far West look to us for leadership in these things. Boston is a sacred city to them. We who dwell here pass the tablet on State Street marking the scene of the Massacre, hurry by the Old State House, race past the Old South Church or the Granary, without giving a thought to the fact that we are on historic ground.

FUND CLIMBING.

"How differently our visitors from the interior are affected. How much they look up to the Bostonian who comes to visit them in their home towns.

"This vote of the School Committee, now assured to us by the frank statements of Dr. Bogan and Messrs. Sullivan and O'Hare, will mean that Boston is to be placed before the rest of the country, and particularly before the more than 800,000 members of our order, in its proper light. And by that I mean in its 'old, light, as the Boston of the Tea Party, and Paul Revere—and 'Old Ironsides'!"

The "Save Old Ironsides" Fund had climbed today to approximately $126,000, or about $6,000 beyond the figure last Thursday when Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, U. S. N., commandant of the First Naval District, informed the Boston Evening American that unless Boston and other cities of the first class rally to the cause the attempt to raise the money through the public schools of the country, a work inaugurated by the Elks in co-operation with the Navy and with the approval of President Coolidge, must be a failure.

SCHOOL COLLECTIONS.

Among the larger contributions of the past few days have been the following:

B. P. O. E. Lodge	Amount
Watertown, S. Dak., No. 838	$437.40
Woburn, Mass., No. 908	361.74
Pottstown, Pa., No. 814	327.00
Norwich, Ct., No. 430	321.40
Manchester, N. H., No. 146	277.84
Leominster, Mass., No. 1237	208.79
Bakersfield, Calif., No. 266	200.00

No. 420, up in Juneau, Alaska, sent $81.40; from Red Bluff, Calif., came $88.40; Canyon City, Colo., $132.13; Newbern, N. C., $47.02.

All these collections were taken up, at least in large part, in the schools of the communities named and by local members of the B. P. O. E.

NAVAL MEN RESPOND.

But many communities where there is no lodge of Elks are being heard from. The schools of Islesboro, Me., sent $14.65 this week; the Fremont School of Battle Creek, Mich., $4.00; the Mt. Pleasant School of Alamosa, Colo., $2.00; and St. Joseph's School of Bowling Green, Ky., $7.00.

Largest contribution of all that have been received in the past five days was the $481.33 raised by the officers and enlisted men of the 12th Naval District, with headquarters at San Francisco.

Writing to a friend at the local Navy Yard, also, Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, U. S. N., retired, who was in command here in 1921, shortly before his retirement, enclosed $5 as a personal contribution towards the reconstruction of Boston's naval shrine.

When the fund is completed, and with Boston whole-heartedly in line next Monday evening, officers of the navy believe the last dollar of the remaining $374,000 will be in hand by mid-Summer, the necessary white oak will be procured from those islands off the coast of Georgia where the U. S. S. Constitution obtained her first suit of clothes.

MALLEY TO EXPLAIN.

Two or three weeks ago, the government, having no further need of white oak for navy purposes, offered these islands for sale. Then, someone happened to recall that "Old Ironsides" soon will be calling for more timber. Secretary Wilbur, reminded of the fact, has temporarily withdrawn one of the islands from the proposed sale.

Former Senator Malley will go before the school committee next Monday evening to explain the position of the Elks and to make it clear how closely the "Old Ironsides" essays and the "Old Ironsides" program may be fitted into the regular work of the class-room.

It is earnestly hoped that Rear Admiral Andrews will be present, too, not merely because of his position as chairman of the national "Save 'Old Ironsides'" committee but as commandant of the First Naval District, with headquarters at the Charlestown Yard. If Admiral Andrews can be present, he will be accompanied by Lieutenant-Commander E. S. R. Brandt, U. S. N., secretary of the committee.

Elks' Spokesman

John F. Malley, former Internal Revenue Collector and State Senator, who will explain the Elks' attitude in the "Old Ironsides" fund drive to the Boston School Committee next Monday evening.

JORDAN JUBILEE DEPICTS LIVES OF COMPOSERS

"Moments in Music," with artist musicians of Boston appearing in an entertaining series of playlets depicting incidents in the lives of great composers, was the program today of the Jordan Marsh Company players in Assembly Hall, in the company's Diamond Jubilee Celebration.

The playlets, written and produced by Miss Catherine S. Swett, author and producer of Boston, proved one of the most attractive of the Jubilee events.

The "Governor's Day" program, which was given in Recreation Hall, was featured by the singing of soloists from the New England Conservatory of Music who impersonated prima donnas of past years, and by "The Bouquet of Artists," comprised of members of the Jordan Marsh Choral Society who rendered selections of Civil War days. A capacity audience was present.

AT JUBILEE OF 1872.

The program opened with the playing of the Diamond Jubilee march, the words of which were written by Burnelle G. Hawkins, and the music by William J. McNally, store executives. Besides the selections by the Choral Society and the solos of the visiting artists, there was a reading by Miss Martha A. S. Shannon.

Store Manager Hawkins delivered a welcoming address and introduced Charles Knox and Frederick M. Hayne, both of whom participated in the World's Peace Jubilee in 1872. Mr. Knox, a customer at the store for seventy-five years and a friend of Eben Jordan, Sr., was one of the firemen who beat the anvils in the Anvil Chorus in connection with that jubilee.

The artists from the Conservatory of Music were the Misses Marion A. Newman and Yvonne De Rosiers who were cast as Mrs. West and Madame Peschke-Leutner. Governor Fuller was forced to send his regrets, being confined at home with the grip.

TODAY

Guadaloupe Acesta, will be locked in an air tight chamber, the gas turned on, and they will be the first white men to arrive in Heaven, or any other place, killed in that way.

The thing was first tried successfully on a Chinese gentleman named Gee Jon, but in our high civilization that hardly counts.

ON THIS EARTH the law kills the killers of men in the following ways among others: The garrotte strangles them in Spain. The noose chokes them in many countries. The guillotine cuts their heads off in France. The headsman works with a sword in China and some other countries. Electricity shocks them and lethal gas suffocates them in America.

In Asia, an elephant puts its foot on the important criminal's head. In Russia, the knout, borrowed by Russians from the Tartars, was used until lately to whip prisoners to death. In China, the convicted criminal was sawn in two lengthwise, and killed in other ingenious ways.

Christianity used to burn victims alive, torture them to death, tear them to pieces, pour molten lead into their stomachs all "for the greater glory of God."

Human ingenuity has found many ways of killing human beings, but, as yet, no way of stopping murder, retail by individuals, wholesale, in war, by nations.

WE HAVE WITH us learned gentlemen sent to settle the Greek war debt to the United States, Messrs. Eulambio, Cofinas and Diamantopoulos.

Some red blooded Americans may suggest that those are "queer names." Let them learn from R. W. Livingstone of Oxford that Greek names are nobler than our own, with real meaning.

"Aristocrates means noble power, Aspasia means welcome, Cleomenes means famous might."

That is better than being called "Butts" or "Ramsbotom" or "Mud" or "Peabody," says the learned Livingstone.

Never judge others or their names, hastily.

AS FOR THE money that Greece owes this country, we might well say to the Greeks: "Keep it, in return for what your ancestors have taught us about government, philosophy, abstract ideas, and words to describe them."

"Politics, tyranny, democracy, anarchism, philosophy, physiology, geology, history"—all those Greek works. What would our orators, "statesmen" and scientists do without them?

WHEN MAIMONIDES, great Hebrew scholar, sought to translate Aristotle and other Greek philosophers into Hebrew, no words existed in that language to express abstract ideas, and he had to manufacture them, giving a Hebrew form to Greek words. For that the Great Synagogue in Spain excommunicated him, but his reputation has survived.

LAY QUAKER'S BIG SHORTAGE TO POKER

Police Get Warrant for Lynn Trustee of Friends' Society; Wife Is Silent

Real estate deals and poker games, according to the Lynn police, put Elwood Bryant Paige, forty-seven, trustee of the Friends' Society of Lynn, behind in his accounts and the missing official's shortage will be near $75,000, they say.

The loss in unfortunate real estate transactions was incurred over a period of two years, the police declared in making known that they have applied for a warrant, charging larceny against Paige, who lives at No. 109 Broad street, Lynn.

While functioning for the Friends' Society, the trustee, during the two years, had the handling of $275,000 in cash, it is declared.

According to police, a partial audit of aPige's accounts in the Friends' Society disclosed a shortage of $25,000 today. An audit of the Lynn Home for Children accounts kept by Paige has disclosed a shortage of $20,000.

The Howard F. Poole Plumbing Co., of which aPige has been treasurer for twenty-five years, started an audit.

Paige is not bonded, the police say.

Mrs. Paige, wife of the missing official, arrived in Lynn today from Albany, N. Y., but she rebuffed all attempts at an interview, declaring that she first wished to investigate conditions and attempt to find her husband.

Paige at first was believed to be in Albany, visiting her, but when it was found that he had not gone to Albany, the police were notified of the shortage.

Nor do Paige's elderly mother and his 21-year-old son, Francis, with whom he lived in Lynn, know the whereabouts of the Friends' Society trustee.

Paige was also a trustee of a $50,000 fund, the interest of which was supposed to go towards the maintenance of the Lynn Home for Children. It is out of this fund that the Lynn police say the $20,000 is missing.

The police declare he will be charged with larceny when caught.

In addition to being the trustee of the $50,000 fund for the Home for Children, Paige was al o trustee of a fund of $300,000 set aside for the building of two modern apartment houses for the Friends' Society.

Paige is also treasurer of the Howard F. Poole Plumbing Company of Market street, a position he has held for the past twenty five years.

This company's officials stated today that their books had recently been audited and found to be in first class shape.

COURT MAKES PEACE, COUPLE WAR IN 2 MINUTES

Stephen Nanatowitz and his wife, Vincienda, just can't agree.

Two minutes after they shook hands in Suffolk divorce court today, smiled and promised that nothing would ever come between them again, the wife was granted an order of separate support by Judge Dolan.

Both had filed actions after two months of marital discord. The judge made peace. Arm in arm they left. They stopped at the door. Hostilities were renewed and the Judge, overhearing the cries of battle, called them back.

DRASTIC NIGHT CLUB LAW IS ADVOCATED

Rumors Reach Police That Pickwick Officers Plan to Open Again

Drastic legislation to curb night clubs was urged today at a hearing before the joint committee on judiciary by Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook, Captain Thomas E. Bligh of the State police, John H. Merrick, secretary to Police Commissioner Wilson, and a score of women from social service and church organizations.

Secretary Cook asked that police be authorized to enter and inspect all social clubs without warrant. He estimated that the night clubs in Boston which are "out of the way" do not exceed four or five, and in the whole State one hundred.

Representative Martin Hays, House chairman of the committee, asked the secretary and Herbert C. Parsons, deputy commissioner of probation, to assist in the drawing up of legi lation.

In every case called to the attention of the police, according to Captain Bligh, it was found that "the club license is desired for no other purpose than to cover up the illegal traffic in liquor."

In some instances, he said, charters granted two or three years ago have been transferred so that the original corporation is not represented.

Rumors have reached police headquarters, Secretary Merrich stated, that some of the Pickwick Club officers are intending to open again.

Boys Will Be Boys

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

BOYS will be boys—also producers. Which, in a manner, introduces Ed Rosenbaum, Jr., the anxious male parent of "The Matinee Girl" at the New Park. Ed, Jr.—who really isn't a junior at all, because his father's name is Emile—has been agent, company manager and general angel in stock productions. His theatrical life has been kaleidoscopic—but it has been theatrical. There is a lesson for ambitious boys in the busy career of Ed Rosenbaum, Jr.

WHEN Mr. Ziegfeld first planted the Follies upon an unsuspecting world, young Eddie Rosenbaum, son of the good old Rosey (whose name is Emile), was sent forth into the hinterlands to blaze a trail for the effulgent chorus girl. Those days were well in advance of Mr. Ziegfeld's achievement in glorification of the unbraped maid of America. For five hard, busy seasons little Eddie promoted, exploited, wrote pieces for the papers and otherwise contributed to the Ziegfeld high score in artistic accomplishment.

FEW men reach real fame without some incidental sidelights to brighten the way. Ed. Rosenbaum discovered his own sparkling rays in the writing of romantic songs. Frankly, his life has been crowded with songs intended for enormous public consumption. But until he wrote "The Hour of Dreams," none of the popular song writers of the period felt any cause for worry.

AFTER "The Hour of Dreams," however things were different—so much different that Rosenbaum instantly bought a new automobile with the early profits and with a later impounring of royalties he arrived at a definite determination that managing a theatre in Wilkesbarre, Penna., was no occupation for a baby edition of Irving Berlin. For two good seasons the cousins Stinlebaker was proof to Rosenbaum's friends that song writing could be measured in dollars and cents.

NOW, this boy producer comes into full bloom with "The Matinee Girl" at the New Park. Song writing has been discarded for the apparently more important high kick of a beauty chorus. The chore boy of yesterday is the merchant of today—in the theatre the lad who helped John Drew adjust a new shirt in the late nineties, is now the high-hatted producer. Meet Mr. Ed. Rosenbaum, Jr., of "The Matinee Girl."

FOR THE CHILDREN—Beginning Saturday morning and continuing for fifteen weeks, the Yale University films, known as the "Chronicles of America," will be shown at the Repertory Theatre for the school children of Greater Boston. Professor L. N. Countryman, of the Department of Visual Education at Yale, will deliver a lecture at each performance. There will be two showings on Saturday—one at 9:15 a. m. for the public schools pupils, and another at 11 a. m. for the parochial schools.

NICHOLS CALLS ON HART, AGED 97 TODAY

Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols called at No. 231 Commonwealth avenue today to congratulate former Mayor Thomas N. Hart on his ninety-seventh birthday.

The "Grandfather of the City" talked for a few moments only with the young Mayor and then went back to his bed again on orders from his physician. There is nothing organically wrong with the former Mayor, according to the doctors, but he is somewhat feeble and they feared any excitement on his birthday.

From his bedside the former chief executive sent his greetings to a decoration of boys from the Thomas N. Hart School, who had come to pay their respects and also to many other visitors.

Throughout the morning many messages and flowers attested the esteem in which Mr. Hart is held far and near.

GIRL GUILTY OF SELLING RUM TO BOY OF 10

Admitting selling liquor to a ten-year-old boy, who reported his purchase to the police "so's to save my mother," Miss Mary Gangi of Tremont street, Lynn, was fined $100 today in Lynn.

Miss Gangi is nineteen years old and the youngest woman ever fined in Lynn court on a liquor charge. She paid the fine.

The boy, Robert Hannify, whose story caused a raid on Miss Gangi's store and the confiscation of eight gallons of moonshine, according to the police, was not required to testify because counsel for the girl forestalled a formal trial by admitting the government had sufficient evidence to convict her.

Robert's story was that he was sent to the store to get some liquor for his mother. He had been sent before. Summoning up his courage, he told the police instead of returning home after making his purchase. The case caused considerable agitation among the people of Lynn.

To Oppose Underhill

Attorney Max Waldo Cohen of Chelsea has announced his candidacy for Congress in the ninth district, now represented by Chelsea L. Underhill. Mr. Cohen is a former alderman of Chelsea and is a Republican.

FREEMAN IS NAMED CITY REALTY EXPERT

Mayor Nichols today appointed Warren F. Freeman as the city's real estate expert, to succeed John E. Beck, who resigned. Mr. Freeman, who has been first assistant assessor since 1905, will resign to take his new position. Since 1893 he has actively been engaged as a real estate broker in Boston.

IRISH CLUBS TO HAVE 10,000 IN BIG PARADE

Societies Throughout District Plan to Take Part in Evacuation Day Observances

By JAMES WALSH

Delegations from the various Irish societies affiliated with the Associated American Irish Societies of Massachusetts will have more than 10,000 men in line in the Evacuation Day parade in South Boston, on March 17. This was the estimate from the reports of the delegates at a meeting in Hibernian Hall. Representatives from Lowell, Lawrence, Lynn and many other cities and towns in the Commonwealth, as well as practically every Irish society in Greater Boston, reported that their respective societies would have full representation.

Features of the American Irish representation in the parade will consist of floats depicting scenes of the Irish during the revolutionary period. Meetings of the society will be held frequently until Evacuation Day.

Richard Dwyer, former national vice-president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians presided at the meeting. The speakers included James J. Byrne, Chief Ranger of the Irish National Foresters; Joseph Kerr, District Chief Ranger; David Galvin, County President of Suffolk Ancient Order of Hibernians; James Galvin, President of the Gaelic Athletic Association; Daniel J. Coffey of the Boyle O'Reilly Associates; Bartholomew J. Fahey, County vice-president of Suffolk A. O. H.; Michael Cusick, past president of the Galwaymen's Association; Frank M. Ternan, Martin J. Judge, Joseph Macenula, president of the Central Council of Irish County Associations; Mrs. Norah Kelly Foley, treasurer of the Central Council; Miss Catherine C. Keohane of the Ladies of St. Finbarr; John J. Foley of the County Carlow Association and Joseph D. Ternan. William H. O'Brien, of the Public Utilities Commission, addressed the members.

The regular monthly meeting of the County Sligo Association will be held in Sarsfield Hall, Hibernian building, Sunday evening, Jan. 24. Final arrangements for the annual ball of the association, to be held in Hibernian building on Feb. 11, will be made.

The second annual dance of Erin's Own Hurling Club will be held near Monday evening in Corinthian Hall, Duncon building, South End. John J. Lancaster, chairman of the committee of arrangements, has outlined an interesting program, including old-time Gaelic dances. Captain William P. Barry is chairman of the reception committee. James J. O'Neil will be floor marshal; Michael Huchison, assistant; Thomas Gough, floor director; Thomas Dunne, assistant, and Patrick J. Keeffe, chief of aids.

The following officers of the County Dublin Association were elected and installed by Joseph Magennis, president of the Central Council of Irish County Clubs, and staff, in Russell Hall, South End:

W. J. O'Brien, president; J. J. Kelly, vice-president; Mrs. J. Kelly, recording secretary; John O'Connor, corresponding secretary; Joseph P. Kearney, treasurer; J. J. Murphy, financial secretary; J. J. O'Brien, sergeant-at-arms, and Frank Carr, sentinel.

The next meeting of the Michael Davitt Council, A. A. R. I. R., will be held next Sunday evening in Paine Memorial Hall, Appleton street, South End. Michael J. O'Dea, president, will preside. Several prominent speakers will address the meeting.

Fr. Albert Council will have a whist party in Needham Hall on Friday evening, Jan. 22.

Division 7, Ancient Order of Hibernians, will have a whist and Forty-Five party in Lyceum Hall, Brookline, on Friday evening, Jan. 23.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Mrs. Van Rensselaer Thayer and Daughter Visiting Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards

MRS. STEPHEN VAN RENSSELAER THAYER and Miss Julia Thayer, her daughter, over from their Paris home for the briefest of stays in town (they are house guests of Mrs. Clarence Ransom Edwards at "Doneroving") are caught up in a perfect whirl of the smartest of entertaining in their special honor.

ON SATURDAY NEXT they go to Niagara to be guest of Mrs. George Porter (Mrs. Thayer was Julia Porter and Mrs. Edwards was Betty Porter) and early in February turn their steps again toward foreign shores and Paris.

MEANWHILE, THE BRILLIANT fetes set rolling with Mrs. Edwards' large luncheon last Sunday at "Doneroving" continue at gallant pace—hostesses of exalted place doing the honors. The Gordon Abbotts have a large dinner on the cards for the Thayers.

MRS. NATHANIEL THAYER (securely placed as recognized head of the Thayer clans hereabouts) has a tea on the cards for her kinswomen-by-marriage, and Mr. and Mrs. Timothee Adamowski follow with a large dinner for the notable visitors.

THE GAY REFRAIN continues with the luncheon at which that stately matron, Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, is hostess, and intermingled whenever there's an unclaimed moment the younger set's feminine lights are greeting Miss Julia Thayer, their fair compatriot, with incessant galeties.

SHE WAS THE LOVELIEST of figures at the Senior Supper Dance, appearing at that stronghold of the exclusives under the wing of her cousin, Mrs. William S. Patten. In a green velvet gown Miss Thayer's girlish beauty was radiantly set off.

HER FORMAL PRESENTATION to society took place two Winters ago in Paris where she and her mother move and have their being in the French city's aristocratic faubourg. Two Winters ago they came over for just such a brief visit as the present one.

CARDS OF INVITATION from the Robert C. Vose Galleries in Boylston street called Boston's allied art and social circles to meet the notable Russian master, Nicolai Fechin, and Madame Fechin at today's private view of the Fechin works.

FUNCTIONS SUCH as this at the Vose Galleries have large place in the Winter's program, and there was a throng to greet the Russians. Mr. Fechin, first modernist to exhibit under the Vose wing, is—so the critical have it—a figure quite outstanding in modern Russian art.

ADDED TO THAT is the background of titanic struggle through revolutionary days to retain the high estate he had already gained in Russia's circle of creative artists. A year or so ago he arrived in America and now has several showings to his credit, all preliminary and adding zest to the Vose exhibition, of course.

JOYOUS IS THE ATMOSPHERE pervading the Soldiers' Shop camp (officially the Disabled Ex-Service Men's Exchange) as it becomes certain that tomorrow's theatrical benefit at the Castle Square will be a stupendous financial success.

SO LARGE IS the advance sale that even before the curtain rises up the "standing-room-only" sign may have to be posted. It was with rare foresight and great good judgment that Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards and her fellow workers decided on a ticket sale with no advance over regular prices.

AND GIVEN SUCH a thoroughly established favorite as "Abie's Irish Rose" for the theatrical attraction and the Service Men's Exchange to benefit, there was double appeal to Boston's philanthropic public. All honor to the energetic working corps and Miss Anne Nichols, author, for this 100 per cent. financial result.

MRS. EDWIN SIBLEY WEBSTER is back in town from New York, following a brief whirl at the smartest establishments catering to Milady's adornment (in preparation for Boston's Grand Opera season) and a visit (with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Upham Harris.

THE HARRIS establishment luminaries in the aristocratic Eighties (to be exact at No. 45 East 85th street) with the former Polly Webster its gracious and lovely mistress in the Americanizing to Milady's adornment (in preparation for Boston's Grand Opera season) and a visit (with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Upham Harris.

GERMANY TO BE MEDIATOR IN SWISS-RUSSIAN ROW

Berlin, Jan. 20 (I.N.S.).—Germany has undertaken the role of mediator between Russia and Switzerland, dispatches from Geneva said today. Russia broke off diplomatic relations with Switzerland following assassination of its envoy, M. Vorovsky. It announced that though anxious to take part in the preliminary disarmament parley in Geneva, it would not do so until Switzerland made official amends.

Eat it!

That's the only test of ketchup

Does it smack of the garden? Do you get the flavor of fresh-picked, sun-ripened tomatoes—the tang of rare spices? Does it put an edge on your appetite—add zest to your food? Is it rich and thick instead of watery? Is there an appealing, satisfying taste you've never found before?

Then it must be Heinz—for that is the way Heinz Ketchup is made and the reason it is made that way, and tastes that way.

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN
VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR
SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

Sandy MacFarlane, well known to local radio fans for his appearance at WEEI, is to be accorded a welcome tonight by none other than "Roxy" and his gang. Sandy has gone to New York to make some talking machine records, and while there will be heard as a member of Roxy's "Gang." This feature will come on at 10:00 P. M. through WEEI.

Tonight is "Scotch Night" over the radio. Many radio stations are featuring Scotch programs in celebration of Robert Burns Week. One of these stations is WNAC. At 8:00 P. M. there will be heard the mournful tunes of the bagpipes, and many of the songs which are dear to the hearts of all Scotsmen.

FITCHBURG IS REPRESENTED AT WBZ

Rocco Pandiscio, the brilliant operatic star, recognized by multiple critics in Europe as one of the best baritones among the many who have entered the grand opera field in Italy in recent years, will feature "Fitchburg Night" and the exceptional group of entertainers which Mayor Joseph H. Delaney of Fitchburg will present from Westinghouse Station WBZ tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Pandiscio, whose excellent work in operas won the attention of the foremost musicians in Italy, Spain and France, made his debut in Rome in 1913 in the opera "Cosenza," in which he took the leading baritone role. He has appeared in several cities in Italy, Spain and France and his initial appearance in the famous San Carlo Theatre in Naples in "Aida" was followed by many re-engagements in this famous opera house. His broadcast on the "Fitchburg Night" program from Station WBZ will mark his first appearance before a radio microphone, as well as his first concert in America.

An interesting group included in this special program is the Franco-American Ensemble composed of 35 artists who will present selections in French and English under the direction of Dr. Alfred H. Quessy. A parody on "The Mountaineer," a Canadian classic number, written by Dr. Quessy, will be one of the features of the ensemble presentations.

The quartet of the Fitchburg fire department will also make its appearance on this program. The fire fighters' quartet, composed of E. J. Congram and E. H. Lyons, tenors, Clarence Willard, baritone, and Walter Hollows, bass, has already been heard over the air and their renditions of old-time and popular numbers have won the plaudits of many radio listeners.

Jazz and popular dance music will be furnished by Viscardo's orchestra, and the Vithalis Trio of violin, 'cello and piano, which will accompany many of the numbers, will offer a program of chamber music.

Preston and O'Connor make up the comedy team and these two talented comedians heard before the foot-lights in all parts of the country, will delight radio listeners.

INTERFERENCE IS GREATEST PROBLEM

Despite the fact that there are about twenty less stations on the air than at the close of the Fourth National Radio Conference, interference is almost as bad, according to reports reaching Secretary Hoover. This is probably due to the fact that most of the stations deleted from the lists were small or inactive stations with low power and short ranges. Practically none of the larger or high-powered stations has shut down in the past few months with the result that interference between stations is about the same as it has been.

The situation can only be remedied, it is Mr. Hoover's belief, when legislation is passed authorizing the Department of Commerce to eliminate some of the stations now on the air or to refuse to license new stations for which there is no public necessity.

The radio inspectors of the Department have to concern themselves with radio interference only, as neither the 1912 laws nor the proposed bill for radio regulation provides for investigating or testing any other form of interference.

If fans are a little patient, it is pointed out, interference between stations should decrease, and today ought to be less than it was a few months ago, on account of the remedial measures taken by the broadcasters to reduce interference between themselves. Eighty-seven stations have been equipped with apparatus to prevent harmonics during the most month, which brings the total stations so equipped up to 18[illegible], including practically all the large stations.

A number of these, and some other stations, have also secured piezo crystals to keep their emissions on the assigned frequencies and thus eliminate what are termed "beat notes," which result from two stations heterodyning each other at an audio frequency.

"EFA" ANNOUNCING"

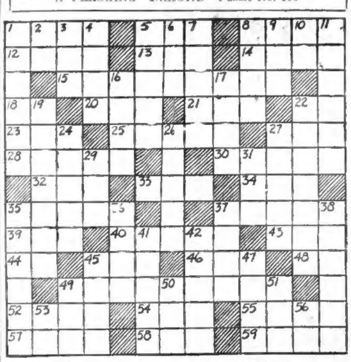

Arthur F. Edes, known to radio fans as "EFA," besides being the chief announcer and program director at WEEI, is vice-president of the Radio Announcers of America. Mr. Edes has been with the Edison Electric Illuminating Company since last September, and previous to assuming his duties at WEEI was program director and announcer at Station WBZ.

It has been the pleasure of "EFA" to introduce to the radio audience many of the leading celebrities of the country, including stage stars, literary lights and statesmen.

DX Conditions Last Night

BY "THE DOCTOR"

Reception was very spotty. It was not a good night. Distant stations would be loud one minute and then fade out. Static was of no consequence although there was plenty of noise in the air. This noise appears to have been quite general since the recent wet weather and may be caused by defective or partly grounded electrical circuits.

Radio Queries

Q.—J. L. H., South Boston. My friend has a thing he calls a "Phone Aerial." All he does is set his telephone instrument on a small circular metal plate. This plate has a wire running to the "Antenna" binding post of his radio set. He gets distant stations with it. Can you explain for me just how such a thing works?

A.—What actually happens in this case is that the felt pad on the bottom of the telephone acts as the dielectric of a large condenser. The two plates of this condenser are made up of the phone itself and the metal disc it rests on. The phone is connected with the outside telephone system, and the metal disc is connected with the radio receiver. Hence what happens is that the outside telephone lines are used as an aperiodic antenna with a fixed condenser in series. A parallel case would be the use of an extremely long antenna with a fixed condenser interposed between the antenna and the set.

Q.—L. A. D., Walpole. Have been experimenting with my bed spring for an aerial. It works all right, but seems to cause grating noises in the receiver which I don't get while using my regular outside aerial. Can you explain this?

A.—While a bed spring may work O.K. for an aerial it can hardly be said that such an arrangement is efficient. The average bed spring is made up of a great many pieces of steel wire, which are hooked loosely together so as to provide a springy effect. If the spring is used as a radio aerial these individual pieces of wire make an imperfect contact with each other. This causes grating noises in the receiver. If you want to make sure of this phenomena, just try sitting on your bed spring while you have a station tuned in. If your set is anywhere near a sensitive adjustment you will realize the importance of having a dependable aerial.

BAR WITNESSES IN DEATH TRIAL

Plymouth, Jan. 20.—All witnesses except the one testifying were excluded from the courtroom when taking of evidence began today in the trial of Joseph Silipo, charged with the murder of Rocco Calvi in Hingham last September.

Silipo is alleged to have killed Calvi when the two men took up a quarrel begun by their children.

The first witness for the prosecution was George B. Hayward, a civil engineer of South Easton and Boston, who explained plans he had drawn of the alleged murder terrain.

Dr. John J. Feeney of Hingham testified he was called to attend Calvi on the morning of Sept. 3, and found him suffering from a fractured skull and injuries to his legs, parts of which had been shot away.

The physician said he administered first aid to Calvi and removed him to the Weymouth Hospital, where he died less than three hours later.

SOUTH BOSTON FLAYS SOOT

Judge Edward L. Logan, the Rev. Fr. Mortimer Twomey of St. Eulalia's Church, Representative James J. Twohig and several other residents of South Boston today protested against the smoke and cinder nuisance existing in that section from the chimneys of large industrial and manufacturing plants.

According to Judge Logan, the Edison Light plant is one of the worst offenders.

Speakers declared that the nuisance is a detriment to health and is destroying property.

The committee was asked to report a bill which would require that not only these plants, but every such plant in the State be equipped with a device to control soot and cinders.

CHICAGO AUTO SHOW TO HAVE SPANISH SETTING

And now the eyes of the auto world turn toward Chicago, where the twenty-sixth annual National Automobile Show, under the auspices of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, will open on January 30 at the Coliseum.

The Coliseum and the Coliseum annex are being decorated with a gorgeously harmonious color scheme predominantly Spanish. The Spanish setting, it is promised, will imbue the show with an atmosphere of old Aragon and Castile, so pronounced and faithfully executed that it will beguile visitors into mistaking the Coliseum for a bit of the land of romance.

Several months were consumed in preparing and designing the decoration scheme. No expense was spared. It was decided that the Chicago show must reflect in a large measure the present conditions throughout the country and especially in the automobile industry.

One of the outstanding features of the decorative scheme will be an immense plaza in the center of the Coliseum dedicated to the creative genius of the world. The plaza will be typical of Spain and the quaint grace and charm of buildings in that country.

Thousands of yards of deep lustrous fringes will be draped about the hall and the walls will be hung with shawls in all the colors of the rainbow.

The automobile display will represent fifty makers of pleasure cars, and eight makers of taxicabs. More than 500 automobile accessory manufacturers will be represented.

The show will continue until February 6.

BUS MEN STUDY SERVICES

"The American people have become hard to please in the matter of transportation, but the Public Utilities are alive to the situation and are making every effort to meet it."

This is the statement of Carl Parker, manager of the bus division of the Reo Motor Company, in an interview on the transportation problem in America.

Practically universal ownership of automobiles among the people of the United States has made them intolerant of any transportation medium that is not quickly available when wanted, Mr. Parker believes. He says:

"Transportation men are making a closer study of the situation than ever before. The transportation interests of the country have never encountered a problem just like the one that demands a solution now.

"The motor bus has already proved it will produce more revenue in proportion to the investment than any other form of transportation, but certainly bus success or failure depends upon the fitness of the equipment purchased to the conditions under which it is to be operated.

"An actual case in point is the recent experience of an operator who purchased as large and high priced busses as he could find. His idea was to educate the people on his route to bus riding by impressiveness of sheer size and expensive ness.

"He was soon willing to admit, however, that his potential patrons, like the rank and file of Americans, had outlived the novelty of riding in any kind of a gas-propelled vehicle; that frequent service was the only inducement that would wean them away from their own cars."

CHAINS USERS CAUTIONED

Beware of placing too much confidence in chains.

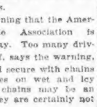

This is the warning that the American Automobile Association is broadcasting today. Too many drivers come to grief, says the warning, because they feel secure with chains and take chances on wet and icy streets. While chains may be an aid to safety, they are certainly not foolproof.

The research division of the association cites the experience of a taxicab company in Richmond, which discarded the use of chains in wet weather and reduced its accidents by 60 per cent. The company attributed this not to the lack of merit of chains but to the fact that drivers don't take chances when their cars are not equipped with chains.

ZEBEDEE E. CLIFF AND TANKER CRASH

Zebedee E. Cliff, not Somerville's ex-Mayor, but the four-masted Boston-owned schooner by that name, was towed into Miami today by the tanker Empire Arrow with a hole in her port side, extending down to the bilges. The injury was sustained when the schooner and tanker were in collision. The schooner was bound from Mobile for Miami with a cargo of lumber, while the tanker was in ballast from Boston for Pacific Coast ports.

ROAD COURTESY IS URGED

The constant increase of motor cars, which is bringing new traffic problems and causing the staggering automobile death toll to mount daily, has spurred the American Automobile Association to a nation-wide drive for observance of the unwritten laws of motordom.

Plans are being broadcast throughout the country today, asking members to have more regard for the rights of the "other fellow."

The broadcasting of this idea followed a survey of the reaction of the average motorist toward rules which have been reduced to writing and those which exist by common consent. This survey showed a pronounced tendency of drivers to neglect the unwritten rules of safety while they still remain within the law.

The report says in part: "The investigation indicated that the disregard for the quasi-legal restrictions which motorists must heed, if the use of automobiles is to remain safe for drivers and pedestrians alike, is due either to the lack of knowledge of what they are, or to indifference to any regulation which does not have the strong sanction of the law."

The A. A. A. plea urges a conscientious effort to do what is conducive to the general welfare, adding: "There is a great and growing need for strict observance of the dictates of conscience and good sense, and no body of men and women is better equipped to further the idea which underlies safer motoring than the motorists who are members of the affiliated A. A. A. clubs."

Thomas P. Henry, president of the association expressed the belief that too much legislation has tempted the average driver to keep just within the law.

An example of such unwritten regulations, which should guide the conduct of motorists, is presented in the act of stopping an automobile. "A case comes to our attention," Mr. Henry said, "of a driver who was caught in the path of a speeding fire engine because the driver of a car ahead would not move out of the way quickly enough. There was no law requiring that motorist to drive faster than he desired, but good judgment should have prompted him to think of the person following. There are many instances when it is positively dangerous to other users of the highways for motorists to travel too slowly.

"Many drivers constantly endanger the lives of others by putting obstacles in the way of safety. They do this without violating any specific regulations. The remedy for this deplorable situation is better understanding of the unwritten laws and closer observation of them."

JAIL MATRON CHARGES GIRL ATTACKED HER

Charged with assault and battery on Miss Pauline Shaw, matron at the East Cambridge jail, Miss Lillian Murphy, a Cambridge girl, was taken from the jail to East Cambridge district court today. She is serving a short sentence in the jail. The girl pleaded not guilty and said she had no one to defend her. Judge Counihan continued the case until January 26. Police say Miss Murphy is also known as Lillian G. Fitzgerald.

COURT SHOWN MOVIES IN SHIP RESCUE SUIT

Salvagers, Asking for Bigger Award, Were Filmed by Amateur on Scene

Movies were presented today in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals by five sea salvagers who have entered an appeal from an $1,800 award by a lower court for their rescue of three yachts at Ellsworth, Me., nearly three years ago.

Walter K. Carter, Albert N. Cushman, Stanley P. Smith, Captain Winfield Treworgy and Percy H. York, the salvage claimants petitioned for 25 per cent. of the valuation of the craft for their work, the usual award.

The yachts Kaimia, Duchess and Namarda, owned by F. R. Richards, Cleveland steel magnate; Warner M. Leeds, New York clubman, and Frederick W. Vanderbilt, millionaire, and valued at $40,000, according to the District Court evidence, were being carried down Union River in Ellsworth and were heading towards Tupper's Ledge to apparent destruction when the five men set out and succeeded in anchoring all three in midstream, while an enterprising amateur motion picture operator ground out films of the proceedings. The film was presented today.

Counsel for the defendants claim that three of the salvagers were in the employ of the yacht owners and are not entitled to compensation, and the remaining two were well paid by the $1,800 award of the Federal District Court.

SILVER SKATES CONSOLATION PRIZES

Franklin Field Will Be Scene of Next Boston Evening American Elimination Event

Skaters, attention!

Hark to the weather forecaster and have no fear that next Saturday's big Winter event at Franklin Field will be spoiled. He predicts colder weather and there is every prospect that there will be fine ice for the second elimination series in the Boston Evening American's Gold and Silver Skate Jubilee Races.

The entries for the big Dorchester event are coming in with every mail to the Skate Editor welcomes new entrants, so sharpen up your skates and then fill in the entry blank that accompanies this article and send it in to the Skate Editor, Boston Evening American, Winthrop square.

The success of last Saturday's first elimination series at Billings Field gave the skate contests additional impetus and there is no question but that there will be an enormous field in each of the races.

DOUBLE INCENTIVE.

Remember that there is a double incentive in winning these preliminary contests. In the first place the winners have their chance for the gold skates to be awarded to the winners in the finals and also the silver skates donated to those who achieve second place in the races. But, in addition, every winner in next Saturday's race will receive a pair of silver skates.

While, of course, the races are to be the big event of the day, the ice on Franklin Field will hold plenty of thrills and plenty of fun. There will be a quartet of expert figure skaters who will cut their fanciest dibos, and there will be the same comely skater who was such a hit at Billings Field.

COMPETENT OFFICIALS.

The same competent corps of officials, or other equally efficient, will have the races in charge, and a detail of patrolmen assigned by Supt. of Police Michael H. Crowley, himself a skating enthusiast, will have charge of the field for the day.

Remember, those eligible to compete next Saturday are residents of Dorchester, and those residents of Roxbury and the South End who did not compete in the Billings Field tryouts.

East Boston, South Boston, and Charlestown are to have their elimination races in the near future.

The classes are: 220 yards for boys under 14; 440 yards for boys under 16; 880 yards for boys under 18; 440 yards for girls under 18, and 880 yards for girls over 18.

BROKER SHIFTS BLAME FOR LIABILITIES

Hackett Charges Jarvis Company Is Responsible for the Debts of Bankrupt Concern

Further testimony was offered today in Federal District Court before Judge Morton, Jr., by J. J. Hackett, alleged president of the bankrupt brokerage firm of that name, to show that the William L. Jarvis Company, formerly of No. 53 State street is the party responsible for the liabilities of the Hackett concern.

Hackett testified that his company bore the brunt of complaints from customers with the Jarvis brokerage house and that on one occasion when he asked Jarvis for cash to settle with disgruntled customers he was told that all the available Jarvis cash was needed to pay off a $16,000 bill in connection with the bankruptcy of C. F. Redmond Company, Inc.

Hackett further testified that his company in 1925 had a ticker service from the Boston Stock Exchange, which entitled the exchange to examine at any time the books of the J. J. Hackett Company.

He told the court that on one occasion the exchange sought to exercise that privilege and on informing Jarvis of the matter was told to have the ticker removed forthwith as the books could not bear inspection.

A Live Serial of Love and Temptation Right Here In Boston

"Deny that you were in my husband's car last night, if you can," cried Mrs. Dexter to Mary Rose.

READ THIS FIRST:

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two pretty girls, the daughters of a widowed mother. They work for Dexter & Co., big Congress street bond firm.

Mary Rose is secretary to the sales manager, JOHN MANNERS, and is in love with him, although he's engaged to an heiress, DORIS HINIG. Because of her feeling for him, Mary Rose repeatedly refuses to marry TOM FITZROY, a young doctor.

Flossie is carrying on a flirtation with the married head of the concern, although she intends to marry Dexter's secretary, young SAM JESSUP.

One day Mary Rose finds her in Dexter's arms in a private office, and when she scolds her about it, Flossie says it's not her fault men fall in love with her!

Doris Hinig becomes jealous of Mary Rose when she learns that Manners took her home with him to read to his invalid mother. Finally, he tells Mary Rose that he loves her, and how he and Doris drifted into an engagement where there's little love on either side. Mary Rose decides she would rather go on working for Manners than to marry Tom or any one else!

One night Flossie comes home at dawn, much the worse for cocktails, and MRS MIDDLETON, her mother, decides to take her in hand. But it's too late—Flossie goes her own wild way. Flossie quarrels with Mary Rose, and to get even with her, tells Manners that Mary Rose is just "stringing him along" and really intends to marry Tom. That day while Mary Rose is taking dictation from Dexter, while Sam is helping Flossie, MRS. DEXTER bursts into the office. "So you," she cried to Mary Rose, "are the woman who's breaking up my home!"

(Now Go on With the Story)

CHAPTER XXXV

(Copyright 1924 by Beatrice Burton)

At first Mary Rose was puzzled whether she was losing her mind, or whether Mrs. Harry Dexter had lost hers.

"Trying to break up your home!" she echoed, her eyes wide with dazed bewilderment.

Her words and the look on her face seemed to enrage Mrs. Dexter all the more. She swelled visibly, and the plumes on her hat shook with the angry noddings of her head.

"That's what I said—you young hussy!" She seemed to leap at the girl as she said it, and Mary Rose dropped back into her chair like a plummet.

"That's what I said!" she repeated, and she brought the palm of her hand down on the top of the desk with a resounding smack. "Trying to take my husband away from his family and me! Making dates with him, and going riding with him in his automobile!"

Mary Rose opened her lips to deny that she had ever gone anywhere with Mrs. Dexter's husband, but Mrs. Dexter gave her no chance to speak. With a movement that was the quick snap of a whip in its swiftness, the furious mate of Dexter turned on her.

"So this is where you've been two or three nights a week ever since last Spring, is it?" she fairly shrieked at him. "While I sat home, poor fool that I was, thinking that you were at the B. A. A. or playing billiards with Billy Edwards, as you said you were! I've worked and slaved for you for twenty years, Harry Dexter, to get you where you are to-day! And this is the thanks I get for it!"

She paused for a moment, and her eyes flashed a look of scorn at the shrinking girl and then went back to her husband's appalled face.

A Wife's Scorn

"Do you think she'll look at you if you're a poor man?" she cried. "Not in a century! What's she after is your money, not you! And you, you blind fool, you can't see it! You think she's in love with your gray hair, perhaps, or your age and

FLATLEY CALLS'EM

Gaston Will Appear.
Players Lack Spark.
Minor Stars Major Flop.
Jones and Hagen.

—By NICK FLATLEY—

A WILD report from Toledo has it that Alex Gaston, catcher [illegible] signed by the Red Sox, does not want to leave the [illegible] and rejoin the majors. [illegible] those present [illegible] just the same [illegible]. This is one of [illegible] asking for more money [illegible].

Minor [illegible] who know they can make the big grade, do this now and then. Sometimes they get away with it, usually not. There is no athlete in [illegible] who has made his minor league speech and stuck to it. It isn't in human nature for a chap to linger with the lowly when he might be with the mighty.

Nick Flatley

There never was and never will be a ball player who didn't believe in his heart that he belonged under the big tent.

MANY players there have been who were glad to go back to the minors, after trying out with the majors. They found the game too tough, didn't enjoy life that was a constant battle. They had the ability to [illegible] big and be heroes in the smaller cities and returned rejoicing.

Even these chaps drift back, now and then. A good year in the minors persuades the scouts that the boy has arrived. The ballyhoo convinces the athlete, likewise. He comes up once more, finds things haven't changed a bit, and coasts back to mediocrity and forgetfulness.

THE little leagues are full of players who are wonders in their own puddles, but who seem to forget all their baseball when they get up around the crest. Some of them have had as many as half a dozen tryouts. They just lack the mysterious something, that spark that has to fire their ambition.

The Red Sox have had quite a few players of this sort in the past year or so. Boone, Vache and Protho, to mention names. It isn't that the boys don't try; aren't anxious to hang on and become famous. But the driving force isn't present, and there's no way of planting it.

GOLF fans hear with regret that Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen will not meet in Florida. The collision between the pair must needs be postponed until the British open. Both will go over to the Isles for that event, and both will be there or thereabouts when the final scores are registered.

CONTRACT READY TO SIGN SOON

Tex Rickard Reported to Have the Contest Just About Sewed Up

New York, Jan. 20 (A.P.)—The Evening Telegram says today that negotiations are [illegible] completed for a heavyweight [illegible] match between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney in July in Boyle's Thirty Acres, the Jersey City arena controlled by Tex Rickard.

Saying that the "story probably will be denied by all parties concerned," the Telegram adds that the reasons for not now making official announcement of the fight include:

1. A desire to avoid any "bad foot" until New Jersey's new Governor, A. Harry Moore, is well settled in office.

2—A wish to await expiration of Dempsey's present contract with Floyd Fitzsimmons for a match with Wills in the Middle West.

3—Rickard's hope that the New York State Athletic Commission may raise its ban on Dempsey to permit staging the match here.

Crediting its information to a "reliable source," the Telegram says that Dempsey gave his verbal promise to Mayor Hague of Jersey City and Tex Rickard over the long distance telephone last week, after previously talking with Billy Gibson and Gene Tunney at Miami, Fla."

"No contracts have been signed," it goes on, "but every detail has been mutually agreed upon, and official announcement only is being withheld until several important angles are straightened out.

"In the event of Dempsey failing to live up to his agreement to box Tunney, the promoters will seek to fill in the date with a Tunney-Harry Wills contest."

The date suggested by the paper, July 4, falls on Sunday, so that the fight, if actually in process of arrangement, probably would be held July 3.

<table><tr><td>RUNYON SAYS:</td><td>Bigger Stake Next Year.
May be $15,000 Event.
Long Beach to Increase.
An Oratorical Effort.</td></tr></table>

—By DAMON RUNYON—

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 20.—Next year the Los Angeles open, which carries $10,000 in money prizes for the tournament won by Mr. "Light Horse" Harry Cooper, may have an added value of $5,000.

That is to say, the stake may total $15,000. Such is the talk of the golf folks of Los Angeles at this time. The $10,000 was the largest golf stake ever contested. Now the West Coasters wish to hang the target even higher. It is the West Coast way.

Damon Runyon

Moreover, I expect to see the value of the $2,500 Long Beach open, which was produced ahead of the Los Angeles open at the Virginia Country Club of Long Beach, materially increased, if not doubled. The members of the Virginia Country Club were talking of making it $5,000 when the other tournament closed.

The Long Beach open and the Los Angeles open were presented with no idea of making any money. In fact, it was felt by the promoters that if they broke even they would be lucky. They were willing to stand a deficit. I am informed that both tournaments wound up with a small surplus, which has encouraged the promoters to plan increasing the stakes.

Thus there may be $20,000 in prizes for the golfers of the land in Los Angeles and Long Beach in the Winter of 1926, with the rich Texas open at San Antonio immediately following. These inducements will lead me to a most profound consideration of the possibilities of golf as a career. Up to this time I have been thinking of taking up golf only as a means of restoring lines of communication with my old friends.

THE game of golf is rapidly approaching what we call heavyweight money. At the pace Los Angeles is setting, it may not be many years before we have stakes of such size that boys who view them with alarm will be speaking of the commercialization of the pastime.

But these increasing stakes merely reflect the growth of public interest in the game. The public is glad to pay for the privilege of peeping at the spectacle of great golfers in action. I wouldn't be at all surprised to see the time when the ubiquitous speculators will be snatching tickets to the big tournaments and offering them at fat prices.

YOUNG Mr. Light Horse Harry Cooper, the cavalryman of the golf course, got a check for $3,500 as first money, the stoutest individual winning in the history of golf, as I understand it.

I know that the check was for $3,500 because I was delegated to present it to young Mr. Light Horse Harry, and I examined the document very closely, and tried it up against the wall to see if it would bounce. There are so many rubber checks around nowadays. It seemed perfectly O. K., in fact I would like to have a bale of them.

The presentation took place in the lounge of the Los Angeles Country Club 'mid the beauty and chivalry of Los Angeles, not to mention all the golfers who had taken part in the tournament, and it was accomplished with one of the shortest and most masterly speeches on forensic record.

I turned to young Mr. Cooper and spoke in part as follows:

"Young man, I congratulate you."

Then I poked the check at him. He seemed somewhat dazed and didn't immediately take it. I thought he might have some idea of refusing it, and I murmured:

"Here's your dough."

Still somewhat dazed, young Mr. Cooper took it and I departed hastily. I believe I heard some hissing as I left, which my operatives have since traced to Mr. Warren Brown, the Chicago golf expert. He was envious of my knack of brevity.

When winter's snow is falling outside—and the wind roars through the trees—when the friendly logs blaze up in the fireplace —have a Camel!

No other cigarette in the world is like Camels. Camels contain the choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. The Camel blend is the triumph of expert blenders. Even the Camel cigarette paper is the finest—made especially in France. Into this one brand of cigarettes is concentrated the experience and skill of the largest tobacco organization in the world.

WHEN it's a winter night and the day that was busy is done. And outside the snow is driving through the trees before the wind. When, inside, the crackling logs catch fire and burst into flames above the hearth—have a Camel!

For Camel is the tried and trusted friend of millions of experienced smokers. Whether your returning steps bring you home tired or jubilant, no sweeter, more mellow fragrance ever came to you from a cigarette. There's not a cigaretty after-taste, not a tired taste in a whole county full of Camels. Only mild and mellow flavor, deep-down contentment in your home or any home where Camels are lighted.

So this night, before your roaring logs of oak or hickory—have a Camel. Open up the famous package of Camels and know the fragrance, the contentment that brings happiness to millions. Put a Camel between you and a light and taste the mellowest, most delectable blend ever made into a cigarette.

Have a Camel!

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

by Marie Queen of Roumania

MOTHERS OF THE WORLD

AFTER ALL, how unostentatiously brave are women!

I never look upon a great crowd of people without saying to myself: "—and every one of those human beings was brought into the world by some woman—the unspeakable effort and agony of some woman!"

Often I think it must have rained children—that all these masses of men and women could not possibly have come upon earth as they do—singly, after the long, slow, tedious, often torturing period of gestation.

I recall the birth of my own six children of whom our Carol is the oldest, and only 17 years younger than his mother! I love my children. I bore them all willingly, happily. But I often wonder why it is that this age of science-miracles has not produced some method of lessening woman's pain in her function of motherhood.

I do know, of course, that there are methods of mitigating the suffering and danger, but, after all, granting that they are reliable they are imperfect. The boon of maternity is still gained with a hardship and terror of which men know nothing, and about which the majority of women keep silence.

Women are brave. Physically more brave, I believe, than men. At least where pain and discomfort are concerned.

When I was nursing in the hospitals during the war, I saw the bravery of men, too—silent, uncomplaining courage. But they were largely sustained by the glory of their achievement, the glamour and excitement of battle.

Women, on the other hand, go quietly down into the Valley of Shadows, without fanfare, without the acclaim of heroism, to fight their fight for life—their own, and the other's. Often they do it alone, or almost alone.

But pain and terror are always borne in solitude—a solitude of soul in which no one else can really penetrate.

To the Mothers of the World I hold out my hands in understanding and love.

It would have been a miracle if he hadn't heard. For Mrs. Dexter was talking at the very top of her voice. And suddenly, to her horror, Mary Rose realized that the door of the room stood wide open.

She got up, intending to shut the door, but Mrs. Dexter barred her way. "No, you don't!" she said. "You sit right there and hear me out. What I've got to say concerns you just as much as it does him!"

"He probably thinks you're in love with him! He probably tells you that all that stands in the way of his marrying you and living happily ever after, is myself! We[ll], I'm going to get out of your way."

"Please, Mrs. Dexter—" began Mary Rose, with tears in her voice.

"Yes, I'm going to get out of your way!" the woman went on in a higher key. "But first of all I'll fix you both so that you'll never raise your heads in this town again as long as you live! I'm going to get a divorce that will blacken both your names so that no one will ever forget them! I'll teach you, you young office vamp, that you can't do this to me and get away with it!"

Mary's Plea

"Margery, this is absurd," Mr. Dexter broke in. He had partially recovered himself.

"Absurd? I'll show you whether it's absurd or not!" snapped his wife.

"You thought I'd knuckle down, and let you carry on with this girl as long as you wanted to, didn't you?" she asked him, leaning over the desk. "You thought I'd do what poor Lydia Murfin did when that jumping jack she was married to ran off with the grass widow, did[n']t you? Let you have your little fling and then take you back! Or better still, [illegible] thought you were smart enough to keep it from me, didn't you?"

Dexter had nothing to say for himself, but Mary Rose had made up her mind that if she died for it she would have her say, and have it now. She got up.

"Mrs. Dexter, I don't know what you're talking about," she said, looking the woman straight in the eyes. "There's a mistake, somewhere."

Mrs. Dexter flung up her hands, as if in despair. "I didn't expect you to tell the truth," she remarked. "A girl who'd try to steal a man from his family could hardly be expected to be honest, in any way. But I have all the proof I need, so lie all you want to! It won't help you!"

Proof? Proof? What proof of the love affair between Dexter and Flossie could Mrs. Dexter have? For by this time, Mary Rose realized, as Dexter did, that Mrs. Dexter had heard about Flossie running around with her husband—and thought that she, Mary Rose, was Flossie.

She wondered, confusedly, if Alice James had found out that Flossie had had her "fired" from the company, and had made up her mind to get even with Flossie by telling Mrs. Dexter what she knew a[bout] [illegible]

Mrs. Dexter was [illegible] relatively [illegible] even if you [illegible] I [illegible] the remark gave her [illegible] fort. "I've been the [illegible] company for years [illegible] of the Dexter inte[rests] [illegible] cern. So if you [think] you're marrying a fortune when you get Hilary Dexter, you're mighty mistaken. Without me, he's just the ordinary little bond salesman he was when I married him!" She snapped her fingers.

At that moment Miss Minnick drifted past the door, looking in as she passed, her eyes round with excitement. Presently Adolph, the office boy, did the same thing.

"This has gone far enough," Mary Rose decided suddenly, and she sprang up and closed the door. With her back to it, she faced Mrs. Dexter. "Please let me say something," she pleaded, her hands outstretched. "You're all wrong—you're all wrong! I've never been out with your husband in all my life, Mrs. Dexter! He's a very nice man."

"I'm glad you think so!" Mrs. Dexter smiled sarcastically.

"He's a very nice man, but he doesn't interest me in the least," Mary Rose went on as calmly as she could. "I hardly ever see him around the office. I haven't talked to him more than a dozen times in all my life—"

"That's God truth, Margery. She hasn't," Mr. Dexter put in his oar. He nodded solemnly.

"Well, leave God out of this, Hilary Dexter!" said his wife. "If you'd gone to church with me a little oftener, instead of playing golf and poker all day Sunday, you wouldn't be the creature you are today. You'd have some notion of what you owe your family, perhaps. When I think of those girls of ours, and that nice boy growing up, I wonder that you could do the things you've been doing! You should have been an example to them, and instead of that you're a disgrace—"

Wife's Proof

A change came over Mr. Dexter's florid face. "Margery, you haven't told a word of this to the children, surely?"

Mrs. Dexter laughed shrilly. "Oh, haven't I?" she asked. "Why, of course, I have! Why shouldn't they know about you and what you've done to their mother?"

Mr. Dexter seemed to shrink. He hung his iron gray head.

"And you'd do this to me, just on some gossip's say-so—" he muttered.

"Gossip, nothing!" Mrs. Dexter snorted, throwing up her handsome chin. "I have tangible proof that you were out with this woman who works for you, only last night, last night, when you said you were busy at the office! And I believed you—that's what makes me so furious!"

She turned to Mary Rose.

"Deny it—deny that you were in my husband's car last night, if you can, you young hussy!" she said.

"Why, certainly I'll deny it!" Mary Rose answered promptly. "I was home all evening with my own mother. I never stirred out of the house!"

Mrs. Dexter pursed up her lips, and looked her up and down as if she were some strange specimen in a museum.

"Why, you don't know how to speak the truth, do you?" she asked. "You're just incapable of it, aren't you?"

She opened the large purple velvet bag she was carrying and fumbled in it for something. Mary Rose watched her breathlessly, and Mr. Dexter raised his head, too.

There was a dead silence in the room for a moment.

Then Mrs. Dexter pulled a small, crumpled bit of linen from her purse and threw it down on her husband's desk.

Mary Rose picked up the square of linen. There were no initials, no mark of any kind on it. "What makes you think this is mine?" she asked.

"Because I found it this morning in my husband's automobile," Mrs. Dexter answered simply.

"But that doesn't prove anything," the girl answered. "Anybody's handkerchief could be in your husband's car."

Again Mrs. Dexter's heavily-jeweled hand went into the velvet bag. And then she threw down on the desk something that rattled as it fell.

It was a gold vanity case, with jade green and platinum stripes. Upon it was engraved "F. M." And Mary Rose paled as she looked at it.

For there could be no mistake about it. The case belonged to Flossie. It was the one that Mr. Dexter had given her six months ago!

How will Hilary Dexter explain the mystery of the vanity case and handkerchief? Will he—but read tomorrow's installment.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found how to save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for results. It gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Do Not Curb Child Impulses, Dr. Reed Says

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

AT a very early age the child passes from dependence to a stage in which it starts to insist on its own way.

Every impulse of fear, anger, curiosity or possession that he feels, he must immediately gratify. He has a will of his own, but it is not true to say that he has a strong will.

The essential difference is this: A self-willed person cannot control his impulses, but is compelled to give them full expression at once.

Will, however, is that power with which we attain our conscious ends, and when it is developed it gives us self-control and self mastery.

The will consists of two important factors: One is force, energy or drive and the other is conscious direction toward an end.

A will that depends on the impulsive passions of the [illegible] not a true will but these [illegible] willed impulses which [illegible] so antagonistic are the [illegible] source of its power.

It is therefore extremely important that a child's [illegible] should not be thwarted or [crushed] but should be given an [illegible]

Repression [illegible] chances of controlling [illegible] They will be driven [illegible] and emerge as rebellious [illegible] pathological compulsion.

There are in the child's mind other impulses besides these [primi]tive passions. One is the de[sire] to achieve and the other is the development of an ideal. In these two lie the elements of self discipline and self-mastery. This discipline does not come entirely from external restraints; a healthy fear of punishment is a very necessary part of it, but only in so far as it develops the self-control that comes from within.

[illegible]

[illegible] persistence are all there and finally achievement when it turns triumphantly and asks for admiration.

If the child is strongly self willed [illegible] Other children [illegible] but are [illegible]

[illegible] courages its desire for independence [illegible]

Hannah Wing on Pressing Clothes

By Hannah Wing
An Acknowledged Authority on All Matters Pertaining to Household Management.

BRUSH the dirt out is one rule in prolonging the life and usefulness of clothes as fine particles of dirt wear the fabric and cut the fibre. Remove all spots on clothing at once before dirt can get into them and if one would appear at one's best keep garments well pressed at all time.

But good pressing is an art and bad pressing is worse than none. To press well one must learn to use an iron skillfully and to make good use of steam. No hard and fast rule about the amount of steam required can be given; but, in general the heavier the material is, the more steam and the hotter the iron needed.

For heavy material a thick pressing cloth is necessary to carry sufficient moisture and steam to the garment being pressed. For thinner material, such as silks of all kinds, less steam and thinner pressing cloths are required. Neither should the iron be so hot for thin as for the thick material.

There is no material, unless it is chiffon, that cannot be steamed slightly. By steaming slightly is meant wetting a thin piece of cloth, wringing it as dry as possible, then drying it even more with the hot iron by patting it with the iron until it is just damp, before using it on the material to be pressed. This thin damp cloth will give just a small amount of steam and may be used on almost any silk material.

The iron should be hot enough to snap sharply, especially if a damp cloth is to be used.

Do not use the finger tips to sprinkle water on any kind of material. Always use a cloth. In this way only can you be sure of an even amount of moisture and a flat well pressed seam.

When pressing material, whatever it may be, if it is supposed to be straight when finished, be sure to lay it straight on the board. Do not lay a seam, a pleat or hem on the board in a curve if you expect it [to] come out straight; it will be a c[urv]e that will stay if you have steamed it in.

Keep the iron in motion in order not to get a sharp and sometimes deep crease where the edge of the iron comes.

Always press on the wrong side of the material and always with the grain of the goods. If for any reason it becomes absolutely necessary to use an [illegible] special precautions must be [u]se[d]. [In the] first place a dry cloth, then a damp one over the place to be pressed. Then just pat the cloth with the iron, being careful not to make a [illegible]

The ironing board must be well padded. Newspapers make one of the best possible pads. Separate the sheets and lay them on the board one at a time, lapping the edges [until] there is a [illegible] in thickness [illegible] the sides, fol[d]ing [illegible] of the board.

Cover this pad with several thicknesses of cloth, stretch these tightly and nail them to the board. The cover and the padding must have no seams, folds or wrinkles that may leave their print on the garment that is to be pressed. Adjustable covers may be used over [illegible] to keep it in g[ood] [illegible]

DAILY SHORT STORY

ROMANCE MASQUERADES

By Eudora Ramsay Richardson

In a [illegible] circle on the floor sat [illegible] Sigmas. The pennants on the walls, the gay blankets that covered the cots, the wild profusion of pillows claimed for the room a virgin parentage within the sanctum of a college. Finally the meeting came to an end, and the sisters [illegible] their pretty forms upon the [illegible] beds.

[illegible] wailed the Baby [illegible] distress.

Betty [illegible] in a moment, stamping her [illegible] foot in a fury.

All Act Alike

"You use your own mashes," she [illegible] of mine. They all talk alike, act alike, kiss alike. I want something new."

"Now wouldn't that freeze the kisses that have warmed you?" was [illegible] ment of a girl who lifted her head from an illustrated magazine.

"I'm not going to the Thurman masquerade ball next Wednesday," Betty continued more calmly after someone had gone out with the food order.

"I'm going to tell Terry you're not worth one wave of his hair," Polly snapped.

By way of reply Betty yawned. Finally the food came a[illegible] everyone grew happy again.

That night after the girls had all left the room, Betty knelt by the window—glad to be alone, and that her roommate had gone to somebody's wedding. The [illegible] suggested love and [illegible] midnight trysts—everything [illegible] which Betty yearned. She [illegible] up at the friendly little [illegible] seemed to tell her that [illegible] had not done an original th[illegible] last ten thousand years or [illegible] were quite happy. But [illegible] knew that until a boy presse[illegible] technique she would [illegible] find her happiness in his [illegible]

The next morning [illegible] was actually studying [illegible] of the trees when Terry [illegible] before her.

"Look here, Bet," he said, "weren't you joking about not going to the masquerade? It's just two days off."

"I was not," Betty replied curtly. "Now run along. I'm busy."

A Whipped Puppy

In spite of his six feet of athletic good looks, Ted departed somewhat resembling a whipped puppy. Betty giggled as she saw him join Polly, who was evidently lying in wait for him.

"She'll give him an earful," Betty [illegible] without uneasiness.

She had studied for perhaps ten minutes when voices and a sawing sound from behind attracted her attention. Turning she saw tree surgeons at work. They were good looking chaps—probably the graduates of an agricultural college. At that moment Betty decided that she would adore a tree surgeon for a lover.

Just then the men took down their equipment and started toward the West Dormitory—toward the tree outside Betty's window. A few moments later Betty, with her book, was perched perilously in that very window. Pictures danced upon the sun-illumined page, thoughts of romance flitted beneath the scintillating bob. Finally a dark-haired youth climbed out upon the limb a few feet from Betty. The man was Oriental, alluring. Betty rustled the leaves of her book and figured diligently. The tree squirrel, rising to the occasion, plucked a neighboring magnolia blossom and tossed it into Betty's lap. Betty lifted the flower to her lips and smiled.

After that things began to happen for Betty. When she returned to her room after lunch, there was a note on the floor by her window. "Queen of the golden tresses," she read and thought disparagingly of the appellations of the Terrys and their kind—"cutie," "sweetie," "good old sport." She continued to read. The tree surgeon was leaving his equipment because he wanted one more glimpse of Betty that night. If she was kindly disposed toward him, let her hoist her shade mid-way and leave her light burning till nine-thirty.

Light Burned

That night Betty followed directions to the letter. The light burned brightly; the shade was at half-mast, and Betty was wearing a turquoise breakfast robe. At last there came from the campus the uncertain harmony of a guitar, accompanying a male voice of doubtful merit, that sang "Who is Sylvia?" Betty thrilled. Any boy that she knew would have begun with a song that had to do with weather predictions, or the fruit market, or the last acquired baby.

The music ceased. At Betty's feet fell a bunch of wild violets that bore a crumpled scrawl. Betty read eagerly.

"Ask me no more where Jove bestows
When June is past the fading rose,
For in your beauty's orient deep
These flowers, as in their causes, sleep."

The next day Betty felt very superior to the girls with whom she had to mingle. They were going to a masquerade ball. She would remain at home and keep her romantic tryst. During the afternoon the Chi Sigmas gathered in Betty's room to finish their costumes, and Betty helped sweetly.

"Haven't you decided to go, Bet?" Polly asked.

"How could she?" inquired the Baby Elephant, "without a costume?"

"Not going," Betty replied. "But I have a costume left from Christmas."

"Terry won the singles yesterday—makes him Star Thurman athlete," Polly informed, but Betty endeavored to show her lack of concern during the rest of the afternoon.

That night when the others had gone, Betty once more hugged her knees in the window while she waited. Finally there came a scraping of shoes against the bark of the tree, and a dark form swung itself beside Betty. Before the girl had a chance to speak, strong arms held her so tight that even thinking was quite impossible.

"You are mine. You love me. Say you do," a voice whispered.

To the Masquerade

"Oh, I do!" Betty gasped. "I don't care who you are."

"Don't forget that you said you don't care who I am, dearest—don't."

"Never, never," Betty replied confidentially and lifted her lips to the mouth that was searching for hers in the dark.

"Now, darling, can't you dress and go with me to the masquerade?" The same voice—and yet another—asked eagerly.

Betty flew to the wall button, pushed on the light, and saw sitting in her window—Terry—unromantic Terry.

"You!" she faltered. "You framed this with the tree squirrels."

Terry's eyes entreated, and he was very handsome—dressed as a knight of the Middle Ages. After all, he did send the romantic notes and the poetry. He did gather the flowers. It was his kisses that had thrilled her. He wasn't so commonplace after all—even if Polly had probably suggested the way to Betty's heart.

"You will go to the ball?" Terry begged again.

"Yes, yes," breathlessly—"meet you in ten minutes. I'll be dressed as the Sleeping Beauty who has been asleep for one hundred years."

Terry smiled boyishly as he understood. "It's wonderful to be the prince that wakened you," he said as he staged his disappearing act.

FOXY GRANDPA TELLS HIS INTERESTING DAILY BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

JERRY was a mutt. That's all you call him. No one could ever have told by looking at him what kind of a family he had come from. Bunny declared he looked like a fox and gave a shiver when he made that statement. But Bobby thought he must have come from the spitz family.

He was the funniest looking dog in the world and he had the strangest road-gait you ever saw. But nevertheless Jerry was a dear little fellow and as smart a dog as ever wagged a tail. Everybody loved him and what a good watch-dog he was. Junior, his young master, had bought him for a quarter once and there never was a quarter better invested.

Jerry paid back Junior's family a hundred-fold in love and affection and in attending to everything which went on in the house—as if he bore the full responsibility. No tramp or burglar would have dared to put his foot within the front gate.

Of course the day we went to see Junior, and his mother and father and sister, Jerry was out at the front gate to meet us. He didn't bark at us, because he knew us. All he did was to wag, not only his tail, but his whole funny little body, and show every tooth in his head. Because Jerry could smile.

He tore around us and escorted us to the front door and as we stood waiting for the maid to answer the bell I noticed that the slot for the postman to put mail in was down low—near the floor.

"That's a good scheme," I said. "Letters don't go flying all over the floor when they are dropped low like that."

The maid opened the door and we went in. We had a nice visit with Junior's family. The children scooted off upstairs to see Junior's train and his mother and father and I sat and chatted.

Jerry had run off with the children, but in a little while came down and barked. Junior's mother let him out the front door and we heard him barking and playing with another dog in the front yard.

We were sitting in the living room, this opened right into the hall where the front door was through which we had come in.

Suddenly, Junior's mother, waiting for a moment to finish saying something, got up and walked toward the door as she remarked:

"There's Jerry. I'll let him in."

I thought I heard a click at the door and supposed it was the postman dropping a letter in the mail-slot. But after the door had opened in romped Jerry and jumped up at me as if to say:

"I'm back. Make a fuss over me."

I turned to Junior's mother and asked:

"How did you know that Jerry wanted to get in? I didn't hear him bark."

"He didn't bark," she answered. "He has his own way of letting us know that he wants to come into the house."

"Please explain," I said. "You have me puzzled."

"Jerry is a clever little dog," said the lady and patted his head. "When he was a pup he discovered that whenever the postman clicked the letter-drop and dropped in mail that we went to the door and opened it. So Jerry did the same thing. When he wants to come in he pushes the flap of the drop with his paw to let us know that he wants to get in the house."

"You can say all you please," I chuckled. "I always claimed it and this is a proof that mongrels are often far cleverer than well-bred dogs."

Downieville needs a resident physician and needs one bad. The field for a good doctor is ample to provide a steady income which should not be less than $2,400 per year under present conditions, and with our gold mining outlook brighter than it has been for years, this sum will doubtless be greatly increased with the employment of additional miners.

It was an Ancient Mariner,
And he stoppeth one of three.

"By thy long gray beard and glittering eye,
Now wherefore stopst thou me?"
"The feast is set," the Mariner said,
"Yet I hear no merry din."
The wedding guest he beat his breast
And wept, "They have no gin!"

Through the open door of a classroom in which numerous collegians were assembled there wandered, one day, a stray dog. The prof., perceiving this intruder, said to one of the students, "Foster, put out that pup. We will get along with our usual number this morning."

Foster complied, saying as he did so, "Get out, Fido, one's enough!" And the professor smiled.

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for published smart sayings. Address "Smart Sayings," Boston Evening American.

A teacher was giving her pupils a lesson in hygiene. In her class she had a boy who was not interested in this subject, but as she started to say "Those who smoke will have a smoker's heart, those who drink coffee will have a coffee heart," she noticed the boy brighten up and saw his hand up in the air.

"What is it, Johnny?" she asked.

"If you eat too much sweets will you have a sweetheart."

BRUSH ADDED TO SURETY DIRECTORS

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

Matthew C. Brush.

Matthew C. Brush, former head of the Boston Elevated, has just been added to the directorate of the National Surety Co. Mr. Brush comes close to holding the world's record for the number of companies in which he is or has been a director. National Surety declared an extra dividend of 2 per cent., payable March 1, to stock of record February 15. Following other new directors were elected: William T. Dewitt, succeeding Frank Munsey, and Joseph F. McGee and M. O. Garner, general counsel.

Boosters are needed only by bull pools. The bears say they really do not need any more advertising than the fact that prices are working downward. All sorts of publicity agents are abroad spreading good news to earn their salaries while the market is going upward, but there is no one who appears to get paid for disseminating the bad news that breaks stock prices—it is somehow left to circulate itself.

When the current bull market is over perhaps we will see the innovation of publicity men who will seek to get something before the public that will help drive stocks down. Certainly very little of the so-called bad news that has appeared to date ought to have been allowed to get into print. Nearly all of it has had to be denied later.

Even a Professor May Err

The Truth About a Tribute to Boston's Retiring Mayor

James T. Williams, Jr., Esq.,
Editor Boston Evening American,
Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass.

Dear Mr. Williams:

Word has just come to me that a professor in Tufts College, in the course of a recent public address, made the statement that you nominated Hon. James M. Curley for United States Senator at the recent dinner given him on the eve of the expiration of his second term as Mayor of Boston.

As I heard your speech, as well as the speeches of Mayor Quinn, of Cambridge, the Massachusetts member of the Democratic National Committee, and Mayor Curley, both of whom followed you on the program, I was naturally surprised by the statement attributed to the Tufts College professor. For I not only listened to every word of your speech, but, as I believe, clearly understood the purport of all that you said.

You began with a tribute to the Mayor for his wholehearted support of a well-balanced and intensely modern system of National Defense; for encouraging his son to attend the Citizens' Military Training Camp at Camp Devens; and for refusing to review the "Thou Shalt Not Kill" parade on last Armistice Day.

You then expressed your sentiments regarding certain occurences at the Cleveland Convention of 1924.

In conclusion, you appealed to Mr. Curley, before accepting any one of the many business offers that have come to him, to take time enough to go up and down the State and by the great power of his eloquence expose the relationship existing between the League Court Protocol and the League Covenant, and demonstrate to the country that the people of Massachusetts are still opposed to entering the League by any one of its doors.

You called on him to become "the guide, philosopher and friend of his fellow citizens in the Commonwealth" at this critical hour while the League Court Protocol is before the Senate.

This was the mission for which you asked Mr. Curley to volunteer; this "the office" to which you "nominated" him.

Mayor Quinn, who was the next speaker, was quick to second your suggestion.

And you will remember that in beginning his speech Mr. Curley thanked you for what you said, adding that he saw an opportunity for service in private life of the sort you had outlined, and that he was inclined to accept it.

I cannot but believe that the professor, of whose public address I have just heard, did not attend the dinner at which you spoke and must have been misled by erroneous reports of what you said. Very truly yours,

CLEMENT A. NORTON.

Hyde Park, Mass., January 14, 1926.

Clement A. Norton, Esq.,
Hyde Park, Mass.

My dear Mr. Norton:

Thank you very much for your letter, which awaited my return to Boston.

Of course I did not nominate anybody for the Senate.

Neither Mayor Quinn nor Mayor Curley, who spoke immediately after I did, misunderstood my meaning. In justice to Mayor Curley and Mayor Quinn, as well as to myself, I am glad of the opportunity you have given me to publish your letter, which contains an excellent summary of the substance of what I said. Very truly yours,

JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Winthrop Square, Boston, January 19, 1926.

Why Our Judges Should Be Better Paid

Representative Graham, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, has introduced a bill increasing by an average of $5,000 a year the salaries of all Federal judges. It is not enough; but it ought to pass.

If you wanted a lawyer for your own case, and could pay any price for him, would you choose the $7,500 a year man with part of an office in an old-fashioned building? Or would you want the $100,000 a year man with a big suite on the courthouse square?

Yet to the lawyers who stand guard over justice and who administer the law in every Federal Court in the United States—the men who are expected to decide upon the arguments as between $100,000 a year lawyers—the United States now pays salaries of from $7,500 for district judges to $15,000 for Chief Justice Taft.

It is to their credit that more of them do not desert YOU AND YOUR BENCH for more remunerative private service. But what right has the public to accept such sacrifice from the judges? And how disgraceful of Congress to permit it!

England pays her high court judges $25,000 a year, and has for a generation. She gets the ablest lawyers in the country to serve the people on the bench.

They are so learned, fair, impartial, diligent in duty, and so far beyond the reach of influence that their judgments become the law, are seldom reversed or appealed. The lawyers yield to their learning as much as to their authority.

In America the highest rewards of the law are the fees paid by rich litigants. The judges are not to blame. Congress and the people are to blame for permitting it.

20,000 New Laws This Year

Predicted Growth of Statute Books of America

More than 20,000 new laws will be placed on the statute books of America this year and more than a million new laws in the next fifty years, the American Research Foundation predicts, taking as its basis of calculation the past performances of Legislatures and General Assemblies.

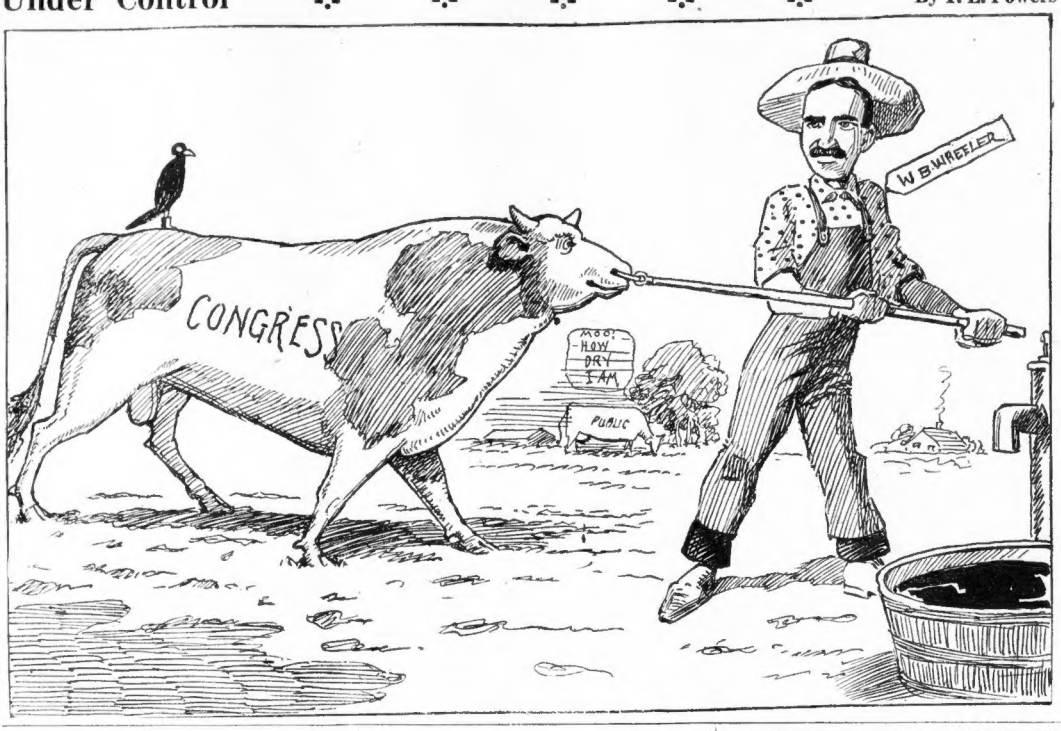

If this is so, the 1926 crop of laws will establish a record in restricting and governing, and the average citizen will become even more bewildered by the maze of fresh "Don'ts" that crowd him in on every side.

Some original legislator has a deal of fame and thanksgiving leaning in his direction through introduction of a measure providing for the weeding out of silly and useless laws.

And the public might even view with complacency a "special pruning committee," for this purpose.

THEORIES ABOUT THE FIRST AMERICAN

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

SIMULTANEOUSLY in Kansas City and in New Haven, in both of which places great scientific conventions were held between Christmas and New Year's, rumblings were heard of the growing war over the question of the existence of "Pleistocene man" in America.

In New Haven, before the American Anthropological Association, Dr. E. P. Goddard, of the American Museum of Natural History, maintained, and Dr. Walter Hough, of the United States National Museum, opposed the opinion that this continent, not less than the old world, was inhabited by primitive man in pleistocene times—i. e., before the end of the last glacial stage, say, twenty or thirty or more thousands of years ago.

Too Advanced

It appears that there were some sharp, lawyer-like thrusts exchanged, which would no doubt have made the ancient men whose bones were before the court stare and possibly smile if they could have heard and understood.

When Dr. Hough, after asserting that the specimens of early man found here were too advanced in type to be regarded as very ancient, went on to inquire whether it was to be assumed that man sprang full-grown with neolithic culture in America without having undergone the process of development common in Western Europe, Dr. Goddard retorted the sarcasm by affirming that Western Europe in primordial times had been notoriously backward, neolithic culture having existed in other parts of the world long before it appeared there.

But it was before the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Kansas City that the rumbling was loudest. There Prof. Byron Cummings, of the University of Arizona, after affirming that abundant evidence exists of the presence of man in America during the glacial ages, in association with mammoths, mastodons and other extinct animals, went on to tell about the long smouldering controversy between the discoveries of these facts and the anthropologists, in whose eyes theories are sacrosanct.

"Some of our leading anthropologists," he said, "have condemned without a hearing facts that are really incontrovertible, and good men have been hounded from the profession by others who happened to hold the centre of the stage at the time.

"A few years ago some United States geologists were making investigations in southern Arizona. One of them was kind enough to address the faculty and students of the University of Arizona on some skeletal remains of the mammoth that had been found in our country. I suggested to the speaker that it would be fine if he and his associates would continue their investigations in this old lake bed until they uncovered some fossil remains of man.

"The answer came back quick and straight: 'Not on your life! If we find any human bones in these fossil beds we'll bury them instanter, pack our luggage and ask to be transferred to some other locality. We are not going to risk our professional reputation by finding any pleistocene man.'"

Only a Creed

This is a pity! But it is well that the reading public should know about it. Scientific work, and especially scientific theorizing, may be as narrowing to the mind as any other form of human activity. There are scientific men who are as ready to die for a theory as the martyrs of a former age were to be burned for a creed. But that is not the spirit that advances science.

For the best scientific theory after all is only a creed, of human invention, like all other creeds.

ON "STEALING KISSES"

WHEN A MAN
STEALS a KISS from
An INEXPERIENCED girl
He CAN get away
With it, that is, IF
He can FIND THE GIRL;
But when ANY man
Steals a kiss
From a SOPHISTICATED
Girl, he not only
STEALS, but he
ROBS her
Of the pleasure she
Was GOING to get
By GIVING it to him.
Only VERY young girls
Believe the FAIRY STORY
That STOLEN FRUITS
Are SWEETEST.
They are NOT, for THEFTS
Are HURRIED and who,
With ANY TASTE at all, wants
A RUSH ORDER of kisses?
The ART of kissing
Seems to consist of being
Able to GIVE and TAKE
At the SAME moment.
But this GENERALLY takes
More than ONE Kiss
And is CAN'T be done
In A MOMENT.
Still. . .

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson

NICHOLAS RICCIARDI is sensitive to boys.

That means more than liking boys. Anyone can like a boy. Or hate a boy. Or boss a boy. Or make Wise Talks to boys. But rare indeed is the adult who is in rhythm with that curious, confused current which sways the inner life of a boy.

Because he feels that way about boys, Nicholas Ricciardi is devoting his life to work for youngsters. He has taught them in school, he has helped in their rehabilitation work when they came broken and desperate from the war, he has served as head of California's first trade school and is now Commissioner of Vocational Education of California.

Now, out of that service and out of that strange, instinctive communion with youth, he has written a book. It is called "The Boy and His Future."

All about kids, but all about kids in a different way. Here's one passage that will make you feel that difference.

"Blake was fond of saying that his thoroughbred dog had almost human intelligence.

"To support his assertion Blake would begin by saying that sensitiveness and a desire to please were decidedly human attributes, after which he would proceed to tell the story of how his thoroughbred dog refused to put in an appearance for his dinner one evening. The children began a search which ended in the discovery of the dog crouched in shame in a distant corner of the orchard. The combined entreaties of the children were not enough to coax the unhappy dog from his hiding place.

"When the children returned to tell Blake of their unsuccessful attempts, he recalled that early that morning he had spoken in a sharp and almost brutal tone to the dog as he crouched playfully at his feet.

"It pleased Blake enormously to discover that his dog refused to return without first having an apology from Blake himself.

"Yet this same man, so willing and ready to apologize to his dog, nearly every day will silence his boy with an angry shout, refusing to listen to any explanation and will even ridicule his boy and point out his faults in the presence of others.

"There are too many fathers like Blake, who don't seem to know that it's just as easy and far more profitable to apologize to an eager-eyed, sensitive boy as it is to apologize to a thoroughbred dog. They don't seem to know that to ridicule or scoff at a boy's dreams and ambitions is the most deadly weapon that a father can wield. It's the surest way to break a boy's spirit."

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

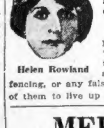

By Helen Rowland

THE happiest marriage in the world is not a faded romance, but a glorified FRIENDSHIP.

Why shouldn't two people be the best pals in the world—after the glory and glamour and pain and disappointment of young love have worn off?

Helen Rowland

There is no longer any "game" for them to play, any sentimental fencing, or any false role for either of them to live up to. They have gotten their eyes open, after the nine-days' wonder of the courtship and the honeymoon—and there is no star-dust left to dazzle them, and to make them see double or crooked.

* * *

They have come to a show-down and the cards are on the table!

* * *

HE knows that he cannot play "Big-Chief-Blood-and-Bluff" or "All-wise-and-infallible-Pooh-Bah" any longer. She has nursed him through the influenza and listened to his moans too often for that.

* * *

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

LAUNDRY statistics show that there are over 800,000 miles of clothes lines in America and none of them is controlled by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

THESE lines run from Maine to California and every back yard is a right of way.

EVERY wash tub is a terminal.

WHILE these lines don't handle passengers, they carry twenty-three million laundry bags each week.

THERE'S a sore knuckle for every foot of rope.

A CLOTHES pin is the national jewelry for Monday afternoon.

EVERY housewife is on the ironing board of directors.

THIS is the safest line in the world in spite of the fact that there's a washout about every two hundred feet.

THE FLAVOR OF ALL THE VIRTUES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IT was said of Matthew Arnold that in all the departments of human life he applied the criterion of delicacy. "A finely touched nature," he said, "will respect in itself the sense of delicacy not less than the sense of honesty."

Delicacy is no virtue; it is the flavor of all the virtues.

It is not goodness; it is goodness filtered through modesty.

It is the gentle hand of the courageous heart.

It is that quality without which the most efficient man cannot be a gentleman, and the most accomplished woman cannot be a lady.

It cannot be explained to you; you must absorb it. It cannot be learned; it must be assimilated.

The lack of delicacy has spoiled many a man's career. Nothing is so great an element of weakness in a crisis as a certain coarseness.

Most fallen American idols owe their collapse to the fact that in some crucial moment they offended the delicacy of the people.

These things are fatal to delicacy:

Egotism. All thrusting forward of one's self, smugness, an air of self-sufficiency, a dictatorial attitude, oracular speeches, me, me, me. The consummate flower of good breeding is humility, not put on or assumed but genuinely felt.

Undue esteem of success, particularly when it implies possessions or fame. This argues gross worldliness of character and a lack of appreciation of the nobler human qualities.

Selfishness, whether seeking the best meats at table, the best seat in the room, and such lapses of the commoner sort, or the more subtle coarseness of monopolizing the conversation, or making one's self conspicuous by over-dressing or jewelry.

Insincerity. This is the besetting sin of writers who desire popularity at any cost. "The slightest deviation from the line of clear conviction," writes G. W. E. Russell, "the least turning to left or right in order to cocker a prejudice or please an audience or flatter a class, shows a want of delicacy, a preference of present favor to permanent self-respect."

Lightly causing suffering in others. "Ah!" said Rivarol, "no one considers how much pain any man of taste has to suffer before he inflicts any."

Insolence toward inferiors. Lack of respect for the feeling of servants. Fawning upon or cringing toward superiors.

Satisfaction with surroundings that are ugly, uncouth, vulgar, and devoid of taste.

All good qualities have a line which they may not pass beyond, else they become absurd. The danger-point in delicacy is becoming finicky, Miss-Nancyish, effeminate.

This does not alter the fact, however, that a certain amount of womanliness marks the complete man; the will of steel must be gloved in velvet courtesy, the strong courage must be tempered with kindliness, wisdom must be suffused with modesty, conviction must be balanced with toleration.

Delicacy is "to make virtue victorious by practicing it attractively."
